The Wine Lounge is Back and Better Than Ever

We've seen the light! At the end of the Covid-19 tunnel. Here we all are – coming at last out of a lingering and sometimes arduous journey – into Level 1. Well done, us! Which means that our Dida's Wine Lounge is now reopened, revamped and ready to go. This month we celebrate 15 years at our beloved food and wine establishment on Jervois Road, having reopened on the 3rd of June with a fresh coat of paint and an array of changes.

Long a local favourite around the Ponsonby/Herne Bay traps, Dida's is located on the site at 54 Jervois Road where our grandfather Josef originally conceived Glengarry's journey back in 1945. Four generations in, it goes without saying – although I will say it – that this site is hugely important to our family. Family is at the heart of everything we do, and Dida's is no exception to that ethos.

Our new by-the-glass winelist sets out to celebrate family wineries, those that like our own family businesses rely on your support, particularly during this time in our collective history. Our new menu tips its hat back to when we first opened, with the addition of a modern twist. The tasting plates are all available to be shared as well as eaten on their own. There's a very good cocktail list, a brilliant array of beverages and fresh craft beer on tap. Behind the bar is an extraordinary collection of whiskies unlikely to be rivalled, a collection of benchmarks and rarities sourced from all corners of the whisky-producing world. Our Wine Journal is a source of pride; the equal of any winelist in New Zealand, it's an unparalleled selection you'd be hard-pressed to find anywhere in the world. It's what we do.

The fire's lit, so come on in – we'll be pleased to see you. Good food and great wine shared in the excellent company of friends and family; these are the things you'll find at Dida's.

GOLD CLAIM 431 VINEYARD
CENTRAL OTAGO PINOT NOIR 2017

Fruit is from the trophy-winning Claim 431 Vineyard in Bendigo. An elegant and complex wine displaying cool climate acidity and ripe, concentrated red fruit flavours. Subtle spice, finely-tuned tannins and velvety textures.

Mud House are celebrated for their great value, easy drinking wines, but they also do a very good number in top-end via their medal-winning Single Vineyard range, sourced from carefully nurtured holdings in the South Island's key winegrowing sites.

Containing soils of clay and loam, the Woolshed vineyard is situated west of Blenheim in the shelter of a steep sided triangular hill called the Delta. This feature protects the vineyard from the frosts in spring and the different aspects of the slope produce fruit which makes for exciting blending options. Vineyard Manager Nev Gane refers to the northern end of the Woolshed Vineyard where slight humps and hollows often lead to differing canopy densities, producing great depth and diverse flavours in the fruit.

Boasting some of the oldest Pinot Gris vines in the Waipara region, free-draining gravelly loams over the alluvial subsoil of the Home Block vineyard enhance the rich, spicy tropical characters of Mud House's aromatic wines. The grapes from the Home Block are hand harvested for the Single Vineyard Pinot Gris. Also in Waipara, the Mound vineyard is named after a geographical mound adjacent to the vineyard that offers spectacular views down to the river bed and across to the Teviotdale Hills to the north-east. Grapes from the Mound are used to make the Mud House Single Vineyard Riesling.

Claim 431 Vineyard in Central Otago is framed by ancient, dry hills and fanned by westerly winds. Formed from glaciers grinding up the schist rocks to smaller gravels and finer particles. its soils are rich in minerals, free draining and low in vigour, so careful use of irrigation is required to maintain vine health. The climate is the most continental in New Zealand, with cold winters and hot, dry summers. This is Pinot Noir country.

De Bortoli

De Bortoli is an Australian legend with a big history and an even bigger vinous imprint. Their output is massive, their land holdings huge. Three generations on, they remain family owned. Their portfolio is extensive, covering everything from premium Australian classics to scintillating prosecco, exquisite barrel-aged tawny ports to their benchmark, lauded Noble One Botrytis Semillon. Anchoring it all is great value drinking.

Vittorio and Giuseppina De Bortoli left war-torn Europe in the 1920s for New South Wales. From humble beginnings making small amounts of dry table wine, mostly for fellow European immigrants, De Bortoli Wines expanded under the direction of Vittorio and Giuseppina's energetic son Deen and his wife Emeri. Their four children – Darren, Leanne, Kevin and Victor – joined the family business and carried forward De Bortoli's reputation for premium wine, firstly through the iconic Noble One and then via the success of the cool climate wines produced at the family's Yarra Valley Estate.

Darren De Bortoli and his accomplished brother-in-law, Steve Webber, oversee the wine-making team. The tight-knit group produce award-winning wines vintage to vintage, representing the finest examples from diverse Australian wine growing regions. Today, as a fourth generation contemplates entering the family business, improving sustainability and constantly striving for further excellence loom large in the family's approach.

Brancott Estate

Taking New Zealand to the World

Brancott Estate's roots run deep – right back to the days of Montana Wines, the West Auckland winery owned by the Yukich family that, ahead of the pack, launched themselves into Marlborough and the rest of us into New Zealand Sauvignon Blanc. Clutching their globe-straddling persona to their hearts, the Downunder pioneers of Marlborough Sauvignon Blanc have taken New Zealand wine to the world. They are, globally, one of our biggest brands, and are utilising their offshore reputation as an opportunity to maximise that fact. Consequently they've rebranded their ultra-affordable, well-made core range. It comes complete with downunder sheep attached, just so everybody is absolutely sure where they're from. And yes, we are the first in the world to see the new look labels, attached to the same great-drinking wines.

Beaujolais

The Passing of the Torch

Beaujolais is part of the Burgundy region, located in its south. Here, the Gamay variety reigns supreme. Within Burgundy, Beaujolais is a brand unto itself, referred to by the name of its area. Suffering a somewhat tarnished reputation from its Beaujolais Nouveau tradition of rushing very young wines to market on the third Thursday of every November, Beaujolais is now on an upwards arc.

The traditionally fruity, forward style of Beaujolais wine utilises the method of carbonic maceration, where the fruit is vinified in sealed vats, the grapes at the bottom crushed by those at the top in an atmosphere of carbon dioxide, the technique producing wines for early consumption. There are actually 10 crus in Beaujolais, their wines generally made using more traditional vinification processes. Gamay is not unlike Pinot Noir, light-bodied with elevated acidity, though it does have a less pronounced tannin structure.

Beaujolais is currently a hotbed of new young winemakers and the region is witnessing a surge of experimentation. Our range continues to include the excellent benchmark wines from the late Georges Duboeuf, to which we have introduced three new producers. All of them are co-operatives that bring together the grapes from a selection of growers to make, bottle and promote the wines. The very best of them produce excellent wines; for instance, mindful of their quality levels, Château des Loges select just the top 25% of the grapes they bring in, selling off the rest in bulk.

Méthode Mumm!

The Champagne Giant Ventures Into Méthode Traditionnelle

Petit Cordon by Maison Mumm is a new kid on the block, a collaboration that saw Didier Mariotti, Chef de Caves at Champagne Mumm oversee the creation of a new premium New Zealand méthode traditionnelle wine. It first came across our radar at the New Zealand Wine of the Year Awards, where it displayed its credentials by taking out a gold and a trophy, no mean feat in a country that is recognised for the soaring standard of its sparkling wines. The winemaking know-how of Mariotti combines seamlessly with the local terroir knowledge of Marlborough winemaker, Jamie Marfell, who has worked for Pernod Ricard since 1990 and leads the winemaking process for Petit Cordon in New Zealand.

Petit Cordon combines the elegant freshness of Chardonnay with Pinot Noir's focus and vibrancy. A cuvée created over many years, the addition of reserve wines has provided complexity, while extended aging on lees for a couple of years has contributed an incredible intensity. The aromatics deliver a surge of lemon and lime notes, with hints of grapefruit and a toasty fresh bread character. Vibrant stonefruit flavours arrive on the multi-tiered, creamy palate, offering hints of honey and freshly-baked croissant. As you'd expect with the super-charged Mumm input, the structure is perfect and the finish deliciously long.

Port 101

Winter's here. The perfect time for port's warm embrace

A fortified wine produced from indigenous grapes grown in terraced vineyards in the upper reaches of the Douro River in northern Portugal, port is one of the most glorious styles in the world. Often left to languish until the end of the meal, it can be overlooked. With the quality, not to mention the sheer range now available in NZ, it's time you sampled this versatile array of pleasures, from a white port and tonic to a chilled ruby aperitif, a tawny port cocktail to a postprandial tippie of LBV.

Port styles can be differentiated by colour, length of time in bottle as opposed to cask, or those that are dated or undated.

Ruby port is the first rung on the ladder; vividly coloured and strong with a fiery nature. Following rapid extraction of colour and tannins, the fermentation is stopped by the addition of spirit, thus fortifying the wine and retaining residual sugar. Undergoing a very short maturation period in port terms, they are then blended, filtered and bottled.

Tawny port is the next level, the term referring to the maturation in wood turning the wine a tawny colour. There is a fairly wide range of styles that can be a little confusing; these are ports that have been aged, and as such are more mellow in nature than their ruby siblings. Aged tawny ports, with statements such as 10-year or 20-year or more on the label are the approximate ages when tasted and approved.

Vintage port makes up less than one percent of the total produced. Made from grapes from a single vintage, these are bottled after two to three years in wood. They are made from grapes off the very best vineyards, and not all years are declared a vintage, with only the best achieving this status. The declaration process takes place the second year after harvest. Unlike the other styles, vintage ports require time in the bottle to mature and express their full character.

Late bottled vintage port is late bottled from a single year. With the maturation done prior to bottling, these are similar in style to a vintage port, but bottled ready to enjoy. They are wonderfully complex wines, softer and more approachable than full vintage ports.

White port is a wonderful aperitif, as well as being excellent with tonic or soda (proceed as you would with gin or vodka). It is made in the same way as ruby port, without the skin contact and the resulting colour. Most white ports are aged for 18 months before bottling.

EARTH SMOKE PINOT NOIR 2018

One of New Zealand's finest Pinot Noir wines, this is for the adventurous drinker. Terrestrial, brooding, savoury and earthy, with dry phenolic thickness on the palate.

The organizational landscape at the iconic Pyramid Valley has, of late, been one of change. Looking at this, the second release of the Botanical range under the new team, there's a sense of calm. This time last year, we were writing that Pyramid Valley had been purchased by Brian Seth and Steve Smith MW. At the time, there were a number of people voicing their concern as to whether the wines would hold up to the hefty reputation they'd garnered under previous hands. After a visit there last year, it was a resounding yes.

There are two distinct ranges released by Pyramid Valley: the Appellation Series and the Botanical Series, the latter offering four wines from the four very distinct parts of the estate. Pyramid Valley occupies a unique place in our vinous landscape, and the Botanical Series captures that in a bottle. The essence of these wines is very much embedded in the terroir of the Waikari, North Canterbury property, each one of its four zones contributing their own particular soils and conditions. Interestingly, the meadows growing in all four parcels are also different, with each one home to its own species of plants. The parcels were originally christened according to the dominant botanicals in their individual meadow, and those names have remained since their inception in 2002.

This year's collection are all releases from the 2018 vintage. A warm, dry year for North Canterbury, the bright sunlight and unique chalk in the soil have produced wines with a beautiful luminous quality, displaying a lively vibrance that's very alluring. The Botanical wines have gained such a reputation that the quantities available here in New Zealand are miniscule. One might think the price tag would slow them down; but no, we can assure you, there will more than likely be none of them left by the end of the month.

New and Exclusive Arrivals From Languedoc and Bordeaux

Domaine de Baronarques

Thanks to longstanding French relationships, we've gained exclusive access to the exciting Domaine de Baronarques, located in Languedoc in the commune of Saint-Polycarpe, near Limoux. The Domaine is a single 110-hectare estate, 43 hectares planted with vines, consisting of 70% Bordeaux varieties (Merlot, Cabernet Sauvignon, Cabernet Franc) and 30% Mediterranean varieties (Syrah, Grenache and Malbec) for the red wines and 100% Chardonnay for the white wine. A very old estate dating back to the 17th Century, Baronarques was purchased in 1998 by Baroness Philippine de Rothschild and her two sons, who entrusted the management of the Domaine to the family company, Baron Philippe de Rothschild S.A. The vineyard and winemaking facilities were extensively renovated. The wine proved to be of very high quality and in 2003 the Domaine was awarded the AOC Limoux rouge appellation, meaning Domaine de Baronarques could take its rightful place alongside the Rothschild family's other estates. Camille Sereys de Rothschild joined her brothers Philippe and Julien in 2014. A new barrel hall was developed and opened in 2018, providing the ideal conditions for maturing the wines and ensuring sustained quality control from vine to bottle.

Glenmorangie

Scotland's Favourite Single Malt Whisky

The Scots sure know a good thing when they have it, and Glenmorangie Original has been the top-selling single malt in Scotland since the '80s.

Like most distilleries in Scotland, Glenmorangie comes from humble beginnings dating back to the early 1700s and endured periods of closure due to war and the Great Depression. Owners, the Macdonald family, were able to capitalise on industry growth with investments in new stills which are famous for their height, standing at 26 feet, with the necks coming in at 16 foot, resulting in a smooth spirit that is noted for its elegance. Possible development around the distillery site was also prevented via the purchase of land surrounding the distillery, thus securing their local water source for the future.

Glenmorangie have also gone so far as to own Forests in America, in the Ozark Mountains of Missouri, which is their source of oak for barrels. These are then leased to the likes of Jack Daniel's and Heaven Hill for bourbon maturation before heading to Scotland to mature their own spirit in. All of this to ensure the best quality final product for us.

The Original we know well; do work on your whisky highballs though. The Extra Maturation Range are what sets Glenmorangie apart. The distillery was among the first to use different wine casks to finish their whisky in, and are certainly one of the best to do so. A refreshed image has these bottles looking the part now too, with clearer age statements alluding to healthy aged stocks at the distillery. The Signet, 2016's Whisky of the Year, is the culmination of a lifetime of experimentation and innovation by Dr Bill and the Glenmorangie team and certainly something to celebrate with! | AS the house of Suntory

The House of Suntory is one of the oldest makers of distilled beverages in the world. Widely known for their more ubiquitous whiskies, they also own some of the finest craft distilleries in Japan. It all began in 1879 with the birth of Shinjiro Torii, at a time when Western civilisation and culture was flowing into Japan. At thirteen he became an apprentice at a pharmaceutical wholesaler carrying western liquors. There Shinjiro developed his palate and mastered the techniques of mixing and blending. At the age of twenty, he rented a modest house in Osaka and opened his own store to sell imported wines. He soon discovered that he needed to blend the wines in order to develop flavours more suited for the subtle Japanese taste.

Inspired by the Scottish whisky he loved, in 1923 Shinjiro invested all his family's money to build Japan's first malt whisky distillery, the legendary YAMAZAKI. The first single malt in Japan was released five years later and was named SUNTORY. The iconic square bottle version came later and went on to become the country's No.1 seller. It was so successful that the company was renamed after it. Torgy bars opened around the county and cultivated the growth of Japanese whisky culture.

Shinjiro's son, Keizo Saji, continued his father's quest to push boundaries. He built the CHITA single grain distillery in 1972, followed by the famous HAKUSHU distillery. From these three distilleries, some of the world's finest single malts and blends are produced. The stunning HIBIKI range was launched in 1989 for Suntory's 90th anniversary. Don't miss some of their other gems: HAKU craft vodka made from Japanese white rice. Or the fabulous ROKU craft gin containing six botanicals sourced in Japan. | RM

Mount Gay

300 Years of Barbados Heritage

Mount Gay Rum is the product of over 300 years of knowledge, experience and refinement, coaxed from natural Barbadian ingredients and the input of many generations of master blenders. Using the finest Caribbean sugarcane molasses combined with pure coral-filtered water from the original artisanal well first dug in 1703, the rums are made from a blend of single column and double copper pot distillates, all matured in toasted oak casks. This artisanal process gives Mount Gay its unique style and rich taste.

Mount Gay employs two types of fermentation. Closed fermentation, used for column distillation, involves the addition of a proprietary strain of heirloom yeast, developed over centuries by their rum makers. The initial open-air fermentation used for pot still distillation exposes the molasses and water to the Bajan atmosphere, allowing breezes to carry native yeasts into the mix to create a unique aromatic profile. The pot still produces intense aromatics and flavour from double distillation. The column still creates a rum that's markedly smooth in taste and character. Both of these are blended and matured.

Only four Master Blenders have held the title over the past 40 years. Today, it's Trudiann Branker, Mount Gay's first woman to hold the position. Three types of casks are used in the maturation process – American whiskey, bourbon & cognac barrels, with others woven in for limited editions. Mount Gay possess the largest stock of aged rum in Barbados, with the maturation process measured not by time, but by taste.

Winter Craft

It's getting cold. And wet. With the advent of the craft revolution, year-round predictability is now lurking outside in the sleet and the hail, watching forlornly through the window as we sit in front of our fires drinking our seasonally-adjusted craft beers. That's us. Think substantial: stout, porter, imperial, barrel aging, creaminess, etc. Flavours to pair with hearty foods. We feel warmer already.

Sawmill

Chins Up & Moving Forward

It has been almost ten years since Mike Sutherland and his partner in business and life, Kirsty McKay, took up the reins of Sawmill Brewing. In those ten years Sawmill has made some of the finest craft beers in NZ, earning a multitude of well-deserved awards and global recognition. Came the dark and devastating day their brewery burned down in a freak accident, the team losing everything, but like a phoenix rising up to see another day after rebuilding the brewery, only to find themselves in the midst of a global pandemic. Sawmill, hard-pressed and against the grain, show that their dreams and determination are unstoppable, but they are much in need of local support. Whether you're a craft beer-swirling hipster, hophead, or a soul of simpler needs finding bliss in a cold pint, Sawmill needs you – To drink their beer! For years they've worked tirelessly, ethically and lovingly to quench the thirst of Kiwis with exceptionally balanced and well-crafted brews. So I ask of you, do you want to drink a beer? Support local. Saw into a cold Sawmill now! | KA

Mac's

New Cans From Mac's

The beauty of the Mac's beers is that they are approachable and easily appreciated by a wide audience. They are a gateway from the mainstream into the crafty. Former All Black and founder of Mac's, the late Terry McCashin, is generally credited with kicking off New Zealand's surging craft beer revolution back in prehistoric times, otherwise known as 1981.

The Mac's beers are easily recognised for their ribbed beer bottles and distinctive rip-top lids. If you've had a Mac's before, you'll be familiar with that particular episode of the rip cap not ripping off cleanly. At this stage one reaches for whatever is close at hand to finish the job – all part of life's rich tapestry, of course.

40-odd years down the track Mac's, now under the jurisdiction of Lion Nathan, is still delivering award-winning naturally-brewed beers and proudly holding onto its independent attitude. Forever pioneering for the modern drinker, Mac's have just released a new range of beer cans, two of them completely new beers, Ballpark and Apparition joining much-loved favourite, Interstate. | TM

TRINITY HILL

NEW ZEALAND

20 years of world-class winemaking in the famed Gimblett Gravels district in Hawkes Bay began as an homage to the wines of the northern Rhône, when cuttings of Syrah from Hermitage and Viognier from Côte-Rôtie were gifted to Trinity Hill's founding winemakers. The cuttings formed the first plantings of the then lesser-known district. These are food-friendly wines, made with love and twenty years of accumulated regional know-how.
