Are we there yet? We're talking about summer, of course, which officially starts... soon. Mind you, the weather isn't quite what it used to be, so who knows what we're going to get. Whatever, we have it covered for all eventualities. Within is a parade of this year's Greatest Hits, our annual round-up of our most popular sellers. These are the wines that jumped off the shelf and high-tailed it out the door through popular demand; therefore they constitute an excellent buying guide as we dive into the summer festivities. Our latest Gift Catalogue is now out and full of good stuff; we've included a wee taste of it here (the offer directly below is, we think, particularly groovy). There's plenty more, as well, to pique your interest.

Stay safe.

VEUVE CLICQUOT
BLANK ARROW BESPOKE TINS
$94.99 49839

Oh lordy, are these cool? Yeah, they are. Last year's very popular Veuve Clicquot containers in the form of road sign arrows and housing a bottle of Veuve's Brut NV are back. With a fabulous twist. In 2017 they carried names of the globe's exotic locations and their distance from Reims. This year, the lid is blank and awaits... the message of your choice! For instance, if you live in Brown St, Ponsonby, you can arrange for Brown St to be printed on the lid! Or Ponsonby! Messages are limited to 14 characters. If it's a bona fide location, the distance from Reims is calculated and printed on there as well. These will be available only at our Victoria Park store, with the printing carried out onsite. We only have 960, and they are going to disappear out the door before you can say, 'pour me a glass of Veuve.' Seriously. Available from November 15 at Glengarry Victoria Park, or you can order online.

EVELYNE DAUVERGNE

To the east of Epernay in Bouzy, Paul Bara have been producing superb grapes off the same 11 hectares for seven generations, the strength of their wines riding on the purity of that A-lister, grand cru-rated fruit and its deep chalky soils. The company falls under the category of grower champagnes, the fascinating set of producers who sit outside the big-name brands but often equal, sometimes even surpass, the flair and the quality equated with those brands. These producers do the whole thing from go to whoa, growing their own grapes, vinifying the champagne themselves and marketing the finished product under their own labels.

Paul Bara, the man, is a legend within the borders of Champagne, his star inextricably tied to the village of Bouzy. When Bara retired, he passed the reins to his daughter, Chantale, with Chantale's sister, Evelyne Dauvergne, taking over management of the House in 2018.

Only the first pressing is used, the wines aged for at least four years in the 9m-deep chalk cellars and the vine yield maintained at very low levels. The vine mix is 9.5 hectares Pinot Noir and 1.5 hectares Chardonnay, the vine age between 35 and 40 years. There is no oak here, just stainless steel and enamel tanks. In a region where the majority of producers put their wines through a malolactic fermentation, Paul Bara do not. Preserving acidity in a region that is cool and on the brink of being unable to ripen the grapes is not the norm, however, it's working well for the Baras; their wines are rich and complex, not at all aggressive or unapproachable.

One of the secrets to Paul Bara's complex and opulent style is their use of reserve wines. This in itself is uncommon for a grower champagne, where the cash tends to be a little more strapped, and the wines consequently have lower quantities of reserves blended in. The jewel in the Paul Bara crown is the Comtesse Marie de France. If you have a thing for good champagne and you like the idea of the personal touch over large corporate, check out these wines.

JULES TAYLOR

Jules Taylor is one of Marlborough's premier winemakers. She was born, serendipitously, in the same year that the first vines were planted there, and has witnessed, first-hand, the transformation that the wine industry has brought to the region.

Although she calls Marlborough home, Jules spent much time wandering the world's other wine producing areas, working several vintages in Italy along the way. On returning home, she undertook winemaking duties alongside Kim Crawford, Simon Waghorn and Matt Thompson. They encouraged her to create her own label, and in 2001, Jules and husband George Elworthy launched the first small batch of Jules Taylor wines.

The road ever since has travelled an upward trajectory. Jules has an intimate understanding of Marlborough's soil diversity and microclimates, and how the unique conditions influence each variety. The singular nature and quality of these boutique expressions has garnered many awards, and a following that spans the globe. These days Jules manages to juggle motherhood with winemaking, and she continues to do things in her own inimitable fashion.

TWO PADDOCKS

2017 AND CERTIFIED ORGANIC

Sam Neill's side project looks less and less like a side project and more like a major obsession with each passing vintage. In this round, Sam and his viticultural and winemaking team have upped the ante by launching their now fully-accredited organic status with BioGro logos on their labels. Well done, Two Paddocks. We applaud.

UNTITLED WINES

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

No name, no shame? Nope, that's not it at all. Untitled is forging its own singular path in search of something unique. Winemaker Lee Winston has drawn his inspiration from the likes of Krug, Penfolds Grange, The Prisoner and Beaucastel to produce three non-vintage, multi-varietal, multi-regional blends. A red one, a white one and a pink one, to be as precise as we're going to get. Now, you may be assuming that this approach equates with some sort of 'cheap quaffer' arrangement, but you'd be mistaken. Our fine wine specialists ran their tastebuds across these and were unanimously impressed with what they encountered. These are great wines, and they'll go down a treat, particularly with the newer generations of wine lovers. Check them out; satisfaction awaits.

A-MANO VINOUSLY EGALITARIAN

Mark Shannon is a Californian who went to Puglia for a short holiday with Friuli native Elvezia Sbalchiero, nursing an affection for the Primitivo grape that rapidly turned into an obsession. Entranced by the region situated in the heel of Italy's boot with its fresh, uncomplicated cuisine and timeless approach to living, the pair made it their home and established A-Mano to craft their handmade, affordable wines. 'To make expensive wines is contrary to our way of thinking,' says Elvezia. Theirs are superb value, fruit forward wines made with plenty of passion and flair. Within one year of its conception, A-Mano had been named Red Wine of the Year at London's International Wine Challenge.

COOL, CRISP SUMMER DRINKING

Chablis

In the 1980s rivers of inauthentic white averageness from all over the globe were labelled Chablis, some without ever having seen a Chardonnay grape, let alone a lifetime growing up in Kimmidgerian soil. Not these days. The oyster-shelled terroir that is one of the key components in Chablis' unique profile is now protected by law, as enshrined and important to the wines as the marginal and northerly aspect of Chablis' location. Only one variety counts here, and that is Chardonnay, which thrives in the same chalk soils that run through Champagne. Chablis is Chardonnay in one of its purest expressions. If you are an exponent of big, buttery versions, then Burgundy will be more your thing than the pure, deliciously lean styles to be found here.

DEEP CREEK

CANING IT IN THE CAN

PAUL BROWN, SCOTT TAYLOR & JARRED MACLACHLAN

Indulging in drinking copious amounts of beer during the Kiwi OE rite of passage seldom leads to an exciting career. In the case of Jarred Maclachlan and Paul Brown it did; although as dedicated home brewers, they would rightly argue that their imbibing was nothing more than a bit of bona fide research.

Influenced by the flavours emanating from village breweries in rural England, monasteries in Bavaria and alpine craft bars in the Rocky Mountains, the two friends started brewing their own elixirs with the requisite Kiwi twist. Starting life as a Browns Bay brew pub, Deep Creek have steadily gained a burgeoning fanbase for their product and now boast brew bars in Orewa and on Waiheke, along with their brewery in Silverdale. On the journey they teamed up with their own personal hospitality guru, Scott Taylor.

The Deep Creekers are fans of the can: 'Cans are basically like mini-kegs. They block out all the light. As light is destructive to those precious organic compounds in the beer that make the flavours we are so crazy about, we'd prefer that not to happen... they form a perfect airtight seal with none of the headspace that bottled beer has to contend with. And as oxidation is the biggest enemy of a great tasting brew, we like to avoid that.'

LILLET

THE ART OF THE APÉRITIF

Lillet is a French apéritif developed in 1872 by brothers Paul and Raymond Lillet, distillers in Podensac, in the Graves region of Bordeaux. 19th-century Bordeaux was the most important port city in France, with fruits and spices coming in from all over the world, providing the brothers with access to a wide range of exotic ingredients for their distilling endeavours.

Lillet apéritifs are blended from Bordeaux wines, along with subtle infusions of macerated fruit liqueurs and spices, the combined ingredients aged in large oak vats. These are quintessential French apéritifs, distinctive and elegant, produced from secret recipes that have been passed down through generations. They can be imbibed on their own, or used in the creation of cocktails.

By the early 20th century, Lillet was famous in France, served at special occasions and official receptions. It also became popular with high society New York bartenders as an ingredient for their cocktails. Lillet was immortalised in Ian Fleming's 1953 novel Casino Royale when James Bond ordered 'A dry martini in a deep champagne goblet. Three measures of gin, one of vodka, half a measure of Kina Lillet. Shake it very well until it's ice-cold, then add a large thin slice of lemon peel. Got it?' Got it.
