The stack of rosé wines on our shop floor just keeps on growing, as does our intrigue with the skills involved in its creation. Given its rapidly growing popularity and the somewhat mind-numbing range of choices now available to your discerning palate, we thought we'd pitch in with some thoughts on how to navigate your way through this vinous treasure chest.

The production method has a lot to do with the resulting colour. There are three main ways to produce rosé wines: 1. Through skin contact, where the red-skinned grapes are picked, crushed and left together for a period of time. 2. The saignée method, where a portion of the pink juice from the grape is removed at an early stage in the production of red wine (intensifying the colour of the red wine) and fermented separately to produce a rosé. 3. Blending red wine into white wine.

What makes a great rosé? Certainly, a pale hue in and of itself does not necessarily confer brilliance. The best are those made with the full intent of making a rosé wine, the fruit selected with care, as opposed to a by-product created using grapes that didn't make the red wine cut. Rosé sales are booming, and it's no surprise that there are many good expressions being made within our shores, to accompany the horde of options imported from other parts of the globe. To ensure that we carry only the best, we taste and select rigorously, our range instore one you can have a high level of confidence in.

So, what are you looking for? Perhaps the following: a seductive aromatic nose with attractive florals and a touch of herbal spice; fresh fruit flavours, a lively acidity and a full mid-palate with plenty of texture and interest; a finish that tends towards dry and is very refreshing. Good hunting.

VOTED NZ'S TOP ROSÉ

TERRA SANCTA CENTRAL OTAGO
19979 SPECIAL RELEASE
FIRST VINES PINOT NOIR ROSÉ 2018
$ 49.99

The Bob Campbell MW review of 2018 included his top New Zealand rosé – the initial 2017 release of this wine, taken off the first vines on the Terra Sancta property in Bannockburn. The 2018 release is, in our view, even better. There are only a small number of barrels available, and we've purchased all but what you will find on restaurant shelves and at the cellar door. A benchmark for New Zealand rosé.

WAIANA ESTATE

Waiana Estate is a boutique family-owned rosé specialist situated adjacent to the Tukituki river in the beautiful Tukituki Valley in Hawkes Bay. They have released three distinct rosé blends from 2018 under their Indian Summer label. All of their rosés are made from sustainably grown grapes and take their inspiration from the dry, elegant Provencal style. In addition to the original Indian Summer rosé, Waiana have released Summer Sault, a unique blend incorporating the Provencal grape Cinsault, the first time this variety has been blended in a New Zealand rosé. The other offering is their Private Blend, an excellent limited release, barrel-aged rosé.

INDIAN SUMMER TUKITUKI VALLEY
19822 ROSÉ 2018

Côtes de Provence

With the exception of Champagne, in France rosé can only be made by contact with the skins; one is not permitted to add red wine to white wine. Provence is a very large area, broken into many classifications, and not all of its rosés come from Côtes de Provence. Within the Côtes de Provence appellation itself, you can encounter some pretty average rosés – beware the wash of cheaper Provençal offerings; it’s a very large area, and they are a minefield of inconsistency. The overall quality has increased of late, in part thanks to a new wave of producers, and the best of the Côtes de Provence rosés are some of the world’s finest expressions, displaying delicate hues, stunning aromatics and sublime textures. At their best, these wines set the rosé bar.

42794 CHÂTEAU LÉOUBE SECRET DE LÉOUBE ROSÉ 2017 $39.99

New Zealand Rosé

Our rosés are the most confusing of all; being the innovative, pushing-the-boundaries types we are, Kiwi winemakers tend to dabble in a wide variety of styles. Hence, a little experimentation is going to be your best option when buying local. Do note, though, that colour does not necessarily equate with style. In terms of New Zealand production, anything goes, and you can make your rosé using whatever method appeals.

ITALY

A-MANO PUGLIA
62946 ROSATO 2017
$15.99 CASE OF 6 $13.99 A BOTTLE

A-mano is the vinous obsession of Elivezia Sbalchiero and Mark Shannon. They craft affordable wines that are handmade with flair. 75% Primitivo and 25% Aleatico (a variety indigenous to Puglia), their rosato is delightfully perfumed and immediately attractive. Dry in style, it’s wonderful value and an excellent aperitif.

SANTA MARGHERITA
62595 STILROSE ROSÉ 2017
$22.99

A winery that likes to push things to the edge does it again with this new addition to its portfolio. Not all that traditional for Italy and not labelled a rosato, this is a delicate-hued rosé that tips its hat stylistically to France. That said, it’s Italian through and through, with plenty of red fruits and a beautifully complex finish.

Spanish Rosé

In Spain, they call it rosado. The colour tends to be a deeper, more vivid red than that of the Provence styles, courtesy of the dark, thick-skinned Tempranillo's inclusion in the blend, and thanks to extended skin contact with the red grapes. Lees contact in stainless is usual, with some aging in oak as well. As a rule, Spanish rosado is bright-fruited, spicy, full-bodied and dry.

SPAIN

MARQUÉS DE CÁCERES RIOJA
87979 ROSADO 2017
$16.99 CASE OF 6 $14.99 A BOTTLE

The leading producer of modern Rioja, the innovative Marqués de Cáceres have done wonders for Spain's wine reputation; their quality's great, the value spot on. Tempranillo and Grenache blended to create a superbly aromatic, forward rosé.

PROTOS RIBERA DEL DUERO
88079 ROSADO 2017
$17.99 CASE OF 12 $15.99 A BOTTLE

The pioneering winery of Spain's Ribera del Duero region, the Protos cellars lie beneath the majestic hill-top Castle of Peñafiel. A vibrant, fruit-driven rosé made from Tempranillo grapes, with soft summer fruit notes backed by floral and herbal nuances.

Mateus

No run-down on rosé would be complete without a tip of the hat to the iconic Mateus. Its origins date back to 1942, when Fernando Guedes set out to put Portugal on the vinous map from his small family winery, Sogrape Vinhos. The centrepiece of his agenda was the ubiquitous Mateus, the first wine to attain true global notoriety, today boasting a presence in more than 125 countries.

PORTUGAL

MATEUS PORTUGAL
78211 ROSÉ
$11.99 CASE OF 6 $10.00 A BOTTLE

The gently effervescent, seductively fresh Mateus rosé is a bona fide classic, if a little less sweet these days as it engages with the modern preference for a drier tittle. It delivers an intense but elegant bouquet and all the exuberance of a young wine. Well worth a revisit.

A U S T R A L I A

MR MICK CLARE VALLEY
23401 ROSÉ 2018
$13.99

Winemaker Tim Adams' tribute to Clare Valley legend, Mick Knappstein. Fruit-forward and friendly, this smart rosé is popping with raspberry and strawberry notes overlaid with hints of lychee and white peach.

DE BORTOLI VICTORIA
29666 ROSÉ ROSÉ 2018
$19.99

The well-respected De Bortoli is a third-generation family wine company established by Italian immigrants. Their pale, dry rosé is everything you'd expect it to be: crisply fresh and generously textured, with intense fruit aromas of peach and pomegranate, a touch of spice and no shortage of sophistication.

New World Rosé

In South America, rosé tends to sit in two stylistic camps: Provençal or Italian rosato. The two below demonstrate this well, their respective ownerships influencing their approach. The difference from the original being, of course, that these are made with varieties that suit the warmth in South America and come with that distinctive, full-throttle fruity style. Well worth checking out.

BUBBLES

Rosé Champagne

Tends to be more expensive than the standard cuvée, but there's a good reason: so many extra steps. Champagne is an exception to the rule for the rest of France, where you can only make rosé by contact with the skins. In Champagne, you can add red wine to white; in fact, you can also make it by contact with skins to achieve sufficient colour, and add white wine to freshen it up. The method of production is merely one of the factors influencing the style of a rosé champagne. The varieties used, the sweetness, the dosage, the use of reserve wines or not, vintage or not, oak or not, mlf or not; the list goes on. A fascinating category that probably requires its own wineletter.

MATAWHERO

GISBORNE GOLD

Matawhero, Gisborne's legendary winery story, began in 1968 when it was established by Bill Irwin and his son Denis, visionaries who did much to enhance New Zealand's winemaking credentials. When, in 2008, Denis decided to sell Matawhero, local winegrowers Richard and Kirsten Searle grabbed the opportunity and purchased the iconic winery. Since then the vineyard has been replanted with new clones and varieties. The Searles have revitalised the operation. The home vineyard has been replanted with new clones, along with a number of exciting new varieties, and the production facilities were upgraded. Kirsten Searle puts it thus: 'Like the Irwins, who passed on a heritage of innovation, we strive to produce individual wines that are shining examples of their Gisborne terroir.'

The largest single property in Châteauneuf-du-Pape, the estate includes 100 hectares of the most perfectly sited vineyards in the appellation. They operate from a manual they themselves call (with some justification) 'ancient know-how.' This involves hand selection of the fruit, a balanced blend of numerous varieties to highlight the aromatic qualities of the wines, sustained maceration to obtain the required depth and structure, and a refined barrel aging programme.

A TASTE OF ITALY

THE WALL SAYS IT ALL

Shakespeare's rather intense play involving an intergenerational feud and teenage death has spawned an astonishing piece of real estate in Verona. In a house claiming to be the Capulets', Juliet's balcony, or more accurately, the walls of the courtyard beneath it play host to the ardent emotions of legions of lovelorn youngsters (many of them tourists) channelling their inner Romeo & Juliet and inscribing their steadfast loyalty to one another. Pasqua, being Italian, couldn't help themselves and have created these no doubt tear-stained tributes to the unstoppable force that is Young Love.

Crisply fresh and lively, a dry finish and intense aromatics of pear and apple. Everything one might expect from such an accomplished producer.
