Here comes 2020

As the clock winds down to 2020, our thoughts turn to stepping off the relentless wheel of routine for a while to bathe in summer's lingering glow and pass a little more lightly through the world, spending precious time with family and friends and maybe knocking off a few of those projects around the place that we never quite seemed to have enough time for. In other words, living in the moment.

Most of us are hanging out for this time by somewhere around the middle of the year, and when the buds finally start popping and the creatures (and children) start stirring, we know we're nearly there. Christmas can come with its own complications of course, but keeping things simple is always a good idea. Food and wine, for instance, don't need to be complicated to make the magic happen; there's nothing better than hanging with a few people you love (or even just like), glass in hand of something that's not wallet-busting, with the alluring aromas of fresh homemade food in the air.

We have that stuff to put in said glass, in all styles, shapes, sizes and price points. Some of it is in here, and a whole lot more is in our stores and on our website. You should really check it out; but if you're reading this, I guess you already are. While you're at it, our gift selection is pretty fine as well.

So kick back. Read the Wineletter. Put your feet up. You've earned it.

Esk Valley

Hawkes Bay's Pioneers of Pink

The Esk Valley rosé's lineage stretches back to 1991. Esk Valley was one of a very small and select group that made a French-inspired dry rosé. In fact the first bottling in 1991 was made from Cabernet Franc, which we fermented in barrels; surely a New Zealand first. The style has evolved over time; the colour all those years ago was more akin to a light-bodied red than the current pale salmon tone.

The grapes were grown in two vineyards, inland in the cooler climes of Hawkes Bay. This is advantageous, as I'm trying to pick grapes with good acidity and less sugar, since I am in reality making a light-bodied white wine from red Merlot grapes. Opening a bottle straight from the rack with no chilling, it smelt amazing: orchard fruit, peach-like aromas intertwined with red berries. Maybe it was because the wine was a temperature at which I would normally drink Chardonnay, but it tasted rich and generous; and then just at the right time, the acidity kicked in. I know if it was chilled it would come across tighter and slightly crisper, but it seemed an ideal temperature for that winter's evening.

The 2019 is a great addition to a lineage going back 28 years. The best yet? Tough to answer, as the Esk Valley rosé was for decades regarded by many as New Zealand's finest, and not forgetting the 2018 vintage was awarded Champion Rosé at the Hawkes Bay Wine Awards.

ESK VALLEY HAWKES BAY 12825 MERLOT ROSÉ 2019 $16.99

A previous medal winner, the Esk Valley rosé has been delivering its brand of high-quality goodness year after year. Dry in style, with a vibrant palate that's fresh and fruitily spiced, it's darker in colour than most, but don't let that sway you; if you sipped it from a black glass, we bet you'd never guess it was this colour.

New Zealand Rosé

ALPHA DOMUS HAWKES BAY 15274 COLLECTION ROSÉ 2019 $16.99

Merlot fruit from the Ham family's Hawkes Bay estate, with aromatics of sweet spring blossom and juicy red fruits augmenting the delicate interplay of plum and red apple sweetness on the palate. Softly textured, fresh and mouthwatering.

LEEFIELD STATION MARLBOROUGH 12270 PINOT ROSÉ 2018 $19.99 CASE OF 6 $17.99 A BOTTLE

Ripe, succulent berryfruits with a hint of cream. A rich streak of strawberry on the palate is nicely balanced by the fresh and zesty acid backbone. A pleasingly dry finish evokes the climate and growing conditions of Marlborough's Waihopai Valley.

RABBIT RANCH CENTRAL OTAGO 11175 ROSÉ 2019 $21.99

A crowd pleaser from the moment it took its place alongside the Pinot Noir. A nose of fresh, floral candied notes from the lightly pressed Pinot Noir grapes. The refreshingly dry palate allows the delicate fruit and classic cool climate mineral acidity to shine through.

WOONG TREE CENTRAL OTAGO 19778 ROSÉ 2019 $23.99

Wooing Tree is a family-owned single vineyard situated next to the town of Cromwell. Their all-Pinot Noir rosé displays a vibrant pink colour from leaving the juice in contact with the skins overnight, prior to a gentle whole bunch pressing. Raspberry and strawberry aromatics augment notes of nectarine and redcurrant.

TERRA SANCTA CENTRAL OTAGO 11113 ESTATE PINOT NOIR ROSÉ 2019 $26.99 CASE OF 12 $25.99 A BOTTLE

Sourcing organically-grown Pinot Noir fruit, this wine has quickly become a New Zealand classic. A fragrant nose of cherry and pomegranate entrances, courtesy of the pristine Bannockburn grapes. Bright red fruit flavours are endowed with a dash of spice, a smidgen of mineral and a deft touch of sweetness.

FAMILLE LE BRUN: VIRGINIE, DANIEL, ADELE, REMY

No.1 Family

New Zealand Méthode's First Family

Founded by Daniel and Adele Le Brun, No.1 Family Estate is unique in New Zealand, with its searing focus on méthode sparkling wines to the exclusion of all else. Daniel was born near Épernay to a family that has been immersed in growing and making champagne since 1684, so his sparkling roots run deep. He immigrated to New Zealand in 1975, where he met and married Adele. The couple purchased land in Marlborough, planted their vineyard with the classic trio of champagne grapes, Pinot Noir, Chardonnay and Pinot Meunier, and began their journey to establish Marlborough as the home of world-beating méthode traditionnelle wines.

Daniel is involved in every stage of production, utilising specialised equipment imported from France and incorporating the processes perfected over centuries by his champagne-making family. Production is focused on limited edition wines, with meticulous attention to detail applied from the vineyard to the bottle. With the whole family involved in the operation, Adele is responsible for marketing and business development and is a founding member of Méthode Marlborough, a group established to advocate for the quality and heritage of the region's méthode wines. Son Remy manages the vineyard, daughter Virginie is Domestic and International Sales Director. In a nice touch, Daniel has created for each family member their own special cuvée, bearing their name.

Domaines Bunan

Mediterranean Magic

In the heart of France's Bandol appellation, the Moulin des Costes in the commune of Cadière-d'Azur is an exceptional place perched on the top of limestone hills. Surrounded by olive and cypress trees, the 45-year-old vines sit on steep terraces overlooking the Mediterranean.

The estate was acquired by Paul and Pierre Bunan in 1961. Paul's son, Laurent, returned to the family estate after completing his studies in oenology and winemaking in California. He was the first of the next generation to open the doors to a more modern approach. Today Laurent is in charge of the development of the domaines Bunan. They have farmed organically since 2008, focusing on the Mourvèdre variety and introducing Grenache, Cinsault and Syrah into the mix.

Laurent's sister Françoise is in charge of communications, Pierre's daughter Claire handles the marketing and her brother Philippe hopes to become an agricultural engineer. Excellence and authenticity are the hallmarks of the Bunan family, and they pride themselves on producing dynamic red wines and sensual rosés of exceptional quality.

DOMAINES BUNAN CÔTES DE PROVENCE 42752 BÉLOUVÉ ROSÉ 2018 $22.99

A lusciously ripe rosé with a fragrant nose of soft summer fruits and violets. Mourvèdre, Grenache, Cinsault and Syrah make up the blend, with the vine age an impressive 25 years average. Made via the saignée method, it's all stainless steel with no oak. Fresh and tangy, with riveting touches of mineral and citrus, this is a consistently brilliant and definitive Côtes de Provence rosé.

QUINTA DO NOVAL VINTAGE PORT 2017

A palate of pure class, with vibrant, concentrated fruit, succulent tannins and superb aromatics. Focused, powerful, it could be Noval's best ever.

97/100 Neal Martin | 17.5+/20 Richard Mayson
97/100 James Suckling | 97/100 Wine Advocate

Making up less than one percent of the total port produced, vintage ports require time in the bottle to mature and express their full character. Made from grapes from a single vintage, they are bottled after two to three years in wood, and can reside in the cellar for decades before reaching their zenith. They are made from grapes off the very best vineyards, with only the best years declared a vintage.

The declaration process takes place the second year after harvest. The whole thing is quite curious, as even if a year is good enough to be a vintage port year, it might not be declared; if the port houses don't feel the market conditions are right, they may not declare. In some years, a large majority declare, and in others, only some do.

The actual declaration of a vintage year is not an official process (the status of a year identifying it as good enough to be vintage is), although the port producers do seem a little more organised and cohesive than in other regions. What is exciting about both the 2016 and the 2017 vintages is not only their quality, but the sheer number of port houses that have declared both years. When the 2016 vintage was declared, the hype around the quality was similar to 2011 (which the 2016, by all accounts, has surpassed). A duo of great vintages is quite unheard of, so when 2017 surfaced as the second in a row, heads were turned. It is the first time, for instance, that Taylor's have declared two vintages in succession.

Clayvin

One Vineyard, Three Expressions

Steeped in New Zealand winemaking history, the Clayvin Vineyard is a special place that produces extraordinary wines. Established in 1991, it was the first commercial vineyard to be planted on a hillside in Marlborough. Planted at just 1.5m wide, its high density and north-facing aspect are two of the reasons the site has been so successful.

Clayvin is organically farmed and possesses its own microclimate. The 13.4-hectare vineyard is home to 7.8ha of Pinot Noir, 3.36ha of Chardonnay, 1ha of Syrah, with the balance in Sauvignon Blanc.

Giesen have been leasing part of Clayvin since 2003. In 2011 they purchased it outright. Remarkably, they don't keep all the grapes to themselves, with Te Whare Ra and Fromm also accessing fruit from the site. Try any of these three wines and you'll be sure to conclude that this Marlborough hillside produces exceptional, world-beating Pinot Noir. An increase in plantings on Marlborough's hills and in its more marginal areas can only mean that there is more to come.

FRAMINGHAM MARLBOROUGH

14136 NOBODY'S HERO PINOT NOIR 2018

$19.99

Disregard the self-deprecating moniker; this is indeed heroic: a soft, fleshy, fruity and flavoursome Pinot Noir boasting smoky aromatics of cherry, cranberry and pomegranate. Graceful and charming, it's enjoyable easy drinking that's even better with a side of salmon.

JACKSON ESTATE MARLBOROUGH

14862 VINTAGE WIDOW PINOT NOIR 2016

Following on from the award-winning 2015, which was voted Best Pinot Noir in the World. Wonderfully long and concentrated, the fruit is off Jackson's oldest vines. Rich cherry and plum characters are spiked with earthy savoury notes. The name? A tribute to the 'widows' of the winemaking team during vintage.

JULES TAYLOR MARLBOROUGH

14352 OTQ PINOT NOIR 2017

$39.99

A dark ruby-red in colour, with a potpourri of aromatic influences, where ripe dark fruits, cherries and plums are layered over subtle oaky notes. The palate is rich, with intense fruit flavours seamlessly balanced with soft, velvety tannins. This will continue to evolve over the next five years.

Gusbourne

England Excels at Sparkling Wine

GUSBOURNE BRUT RESERVE 2015

53% Pinot Noir, with Chardonnay, Pinot Meunier. A cooler vintage displays more red fruits. Tightly structured, there's a wonderful spun sugar note on the palate and incredible drive and focus.

GUSBOURNE BLANC DE BLANCS 2014

Four years on lees, six months under cork. Pure mineral nose; a stony edge, with lovely balance; a real energy to the wine. A little oak is used in the production. 100% malo, dosage 6.5gm.

GUSBOURNE ROSÉ 2015

54% Pinot Noir, with Chardonnay, Pinot Meunier. Light pink hues and a delicate fruity style that is fragrant and charming. 2-3 years on lees, with 1-2gm more dosage than the Blanc de Blancs.

You'd be forgiven for doubting the above statement, but it's true: the Brits not only make sparkling wine, they can make it well. The trade has seemingly come from nowhere to be a strong contender on the world stage. There are now more than 500 vineyards producing commercially in Great Britain, with 71% of it sparkling.

The vineyards are in the south, with close proximity to the sea. The soil profiles vary across the producing areas, with many high in chalk and a welcoming home to Chardonnay. Others are full of clay, producing riper, rich soils ideal for Pinot Noir. The climate is cool and, as in Champagne, marginal for production, though it has to be said that the world's so-called marginal areas produce some of its finest wines.

Located in Kent, Gusbourne are considered the gold standard for English sparkling wine. All of their fruit is estate-grown, their vines in Appledore on slopes running down to what, historically, would have been the coast and is now a damp, low-lying area. With the actual coast close by, the sea has a moderating influence on what is a south-facing, warm, dry microclimate.

The estate as it is today was established in 2004, with quality at the forefront of all decision-making. The clones planted are all from Burgundy, and Gusbourne's viticultural practices follow the concept of lutte raisonnée (the reasoned struggle), a pragmatic approach involving minimal chemical intervention in the vineyards.

The focus on quality sees Gusbourne only produce vintage wine, and in taking all steps required to do so, in 2018 they dropped a third of the fruit on the ground, defining it as not good enough. With their ability to age slowly and gracefully, the Gusbourne sparkling wines sit comfortably amongst the best in the world.

Rockburn

Rugged Luminary of the South

One of Central Otago's star wineries, Rockburn began life as a three-hectare hobby vineyard at Lake Hayes, established by cardiothoracic surgeon Dick Bunton. Some sort of obsession definitely took root, with Dick planting a further 10 hectares in Gibbston a year later, followed by the 33-hectare Packburn vineyard in Pisa in 1996. The winery formerly known as Lake Hayes was rebranded as Rockburn, an evocation of the extreme, unrelenting terroir of the vineyards.

In 2005, Malcolm Rees-Francis, previously the assistant winemaker at Felton Road, signed on as as Head Winemaker. He has added to the winery's enviable reputation, amassing an impressive catalogue of top-ranked global awards. While winemaking excellence is Rockburn's raison d'être, it has been matched by astute management. After leasing premises for ten years, Rockburn's partners Dick Bunton, Chris James and Paul Halford purchased an existing winery building in Cromwell. Following an extensive re-fit and upgrade, the first vintage at the new winery was completed in 2016. The sophisticated technology allows Malcolm to treat the fruit with gentleness and subtlety, the minimal interference in the winemaking process encouraging its varietal qualities and terroir to find their purest expression.

Pask Instinct

The Gurus of the Gravels Release a New Range

It took Chris Pask to see the potential for viticulture in what is now one of New Zealand's prime viticultural and winemaking areas. In 1981 he planted the first vines in Gimblett Road, and kicked off the now globally-lauded Gimblett Gravels wine district. His instincts were right on the money. Chris emigrated from the UK in 1960, and for a number of years worked as an aerial topdressing pilot.

Flying his plane on a daily basis across the dry and barren Heretaunga Plains – then considered the least productive land in Hawkes Bay – Chris saw his viticultural future in the light and stony soils of the ancient Ngaruroro riverbed and purchased some land there. In 1985 he released his first vintage of a much-acclaimed Cabernet Sauvignon.

Thirty years on, the Pask winery's reputation remains undiminished. Manager Graham Bee and Andy Pan take care of the viticulture, while winemaking duties are undertaken by Head Winemaker Paul Smith, with assistance from Moore Haszard and Greg Allinson.

A new range of wines is joining the Pask, Declaration and Small Batch collections. Sourced from selected fruit parcels, the Instinct wines are budget-friendly but quality-conscious wines celebrating the distinctive full, fruity flavours of some of the country's best wine regions.

Sake falls into two basic categories: those with distilled alcohol added and those without. We focus on the latter. With sake classification, the primary factor is the degree to which the rice has been polished. Rice with a higher percentage of its outer husk removed (i.e. more highly polished) is cleaner and more refined, and those sakes made with it are usually more expensive.

Junmai

Junmai is the lowest quality level for sake with no alcohol added. The polishing ratio is 70%, meaning a minimum of 30% of the rice has been removed. The word 'Junmai' indicates that no distilled alcohol has been added. Can be drunk warm, at room temperature or chilled.

Junmai Ginjo

The polishing ratio is 60%, meaning a minimum of 40% of the rice has been removed. This level of sake should only be consumed chilled.

Junmai Daiginjo

The top quality level. The polishing ratio is 50%, meaning a minimum of 50% of the rice has been removed. Should only be consumed chilled.

酒 Sake<sup>101</sup>

The Art of Brewing Rice into Wine

Sake has played a significant role in Japanese culture for centuries. A favourite of the Warrior Class, Samurai would symbolically partake of sake before battle and, if things went their way, would drink it afterwards to celebrate. Like rice, sake became a form of currency. Often referred to as rice wine, sake production involves a brewing process more akin to beer (although not quite), and it is pretty much consumed as if it were a spirit. Sake travels its own road, and as with most things Japanese, its production is nuanced to the nth degree in the pursuit of excellence.

Sake has its own specialised variety of rice, called sakamai. It is polished to remove proteins and fats, leaving the starch at the centre of the rice grain. The polished rice is washed, soaked and steamed; a mould known as koji is introduced to convert the rice's starch to sugar and a yeast starter is added to aid the fermentation process. The versatile Junmai sake may be heated, chilled or consumed at room temperature, while the fragrant Junmai Ginjo and Junmai Daiginjo sakes are best served chilled, as heating detracts their subtleties.

FAMILLE LHÉRAUD: JEAN-CHARLES, ANDRÉE, LAURENT

NEW TO NZ

Lhéraud

We are proud to be representing the family-owned house of Lhéraud for the first time in New Zealand. Generations of Lhérauds have lived in the same 10th century house in the heart of the Petite Champagne region since 1680. Beginning as grape growers, they distilled their first cognac in 1802, a demijohn of which still resides in their private cellar. Guy Lhéraud and his wife Andrée inherited the Domaine and have run it since the 1960s. It was a very difficult time, with many small houses failing and sold off. In an area now totally dominated by the big four brands, they are one of the last family producers to farm, distill, age and bottle all themselves.

Guy stopped selling cognac to others in 1970 and started releasing their older spirits under his own name. They realised if they wanted to survive, Lhéraud needed to stand out for their resistance to modernisation, doing everything by hand in small batches in the old traditional ways. "If you want to make something of quality, you must give time to time". Passion is more than a word to the Lhérauds, it is total dedication. Heady, exhausting and all encompassing. The result is cognac and armagnac of outstanding quality, with some of the most beautiful packaging you will find. Andrée still handwrites the calligraphy labels on each bottle of their rare vintage cognac (they're one of the last companies to offer these), making the ink herself from their acorns, the labels hand-ironed with a flour and water glue and sealed with wax on her stovetop. # OLMECA Altos

Olmeca Altos came from a collaboration between two famous English bartenders, Dre Masso and the late Henry Besant, who travelled to Mexico many times to study the regions that produce great agave plants. Unlike grapes or wheat, agave takes 7-8 years to properly mature; that means the soil and climate have more impact on the product than on any other spirit. The highlands area of Los Altos was where they settled, its red volcanic soil and 2,100 metre elevation producing soft, round tequilas with a greater fruit and citrus presence than the dark and earthy lowlands styles.

The search for a distillery led them to Olmeca, who had the right land and still used many of the traditional methods. Besant and Masso knew they wanted a 100% Agave tequila (unlike cheap 'mixto' tequilas that are only 51% distilled from the plant), so they collaborated with Maestro Tequilero, Jesús Hernandez, who manages every part of the production.

The agave piñas are slow cooked for three days in a traditional Hornos (brick oven). 50% of these are then crushed by a two tonne Tahona volcanic stone wheel, an expensive and time-consuming method that is rarely used nowadays. This draws out sweet juice and syrup from the fibres, ensuring a rich, plush texture. The other 50% is shredded by modern roller mill. This hybrid process is the key to a great tequila that is cheap enough to mix, but good enough to sip. The mash is fermented with all the pulp and fibres from the crushed plants, resulting in a pure and bright cooked agave flavour. It is then double-distilled in small-batch copper pot stills. RM

The Plata is totally unaged and bottled immediately after distillation. Blanco tequila is always a true test of quality, as nothing can be hidden or added. With its fruity aromas and subtly sweet citrus-infused notes, this is a stunning example for the price.

The Reposado is aged in 200-litre ex-bourbon barrels for six to eight months, adding caramel, vanilla and oak characters to the mix.

Lillet

When Bordeaux Blends with the Exotic

In 1872, the distiller brothers Paul and Raymond Lillet founded their company, La Maison Lillet, in the tiny village of Podensac, where it remains to this day. In one of history's fortuitous coincidences of inspiration and circumstance, the brothers created Kina Lillet. The idea was to marry the local vinous produce of Bordeaux to some of the Central and South American fruits then entering Europe through the bustling city port, and it proved a delicious one.

The base of white Bordeaux is treated similarly to much of the wine in the region – aged in oak, racked, fined and filtered. The key extra step involves being blended with macerated fruit liqueurs, primarily citrus fruits from around Europe, North Africa and the Americas.

From these humble beginnings, Lillet soared in popularity in France and overseas, in New York particularly. These days Lillet produce a range of superb aperitifs, with Lillet Blanc replacing the original Kina Lillet recipe in 1986, and the Rose version released in 2011 also proving very popular.

Delicious and refreshing served chilled with a twist of orange, Lillet is also lovely over ice with just a splash of soda. For a fresh citrusy, bitter take on summer cocktails it also marries well with vodka or gin. Or take it from James Bond himself: "Dry martini in large champagne glass, three measures of Booths, one of vodka, one measure of Lillet... shake... then add zest of lemon." DL

Sawmill

Matakana's Resolute Craft Pioneers

Sawmill are a craft beer institution, composing some of New Zealanders' favourite beer styles. Based on the east coast in Matakana, one hour north of Auckland, they are relatively isolated from the concentration of breweries located in Auckland and Wellington. This year at the 2019 Brewers Guild of New Zealand Awards, Sawmill won eight medals, as well as the Brewing Sustainability Award that recognizes the positive impact they have had on their team, their community and the environment. They are committed to zero waste, and have installed the country's largest solar power system for a brewery.

Sawmill don't name their beers, labelling them simply by style. They use the best possible ingredients, and avoid any use of sugar, preservatives or colour. The Sawmill beers are unpasteurized, so they have a slightly shorter shelf life but deliver more vibrant flavours. In their early days, Sawmill recognized that using cans was the best way to protect the quality and freshness of the beer, given their resistance to sun strike and longer shelf life. First off the block and ahead of their time, today canned craft beer has become the norm.

Sawmill were recently struck by tragedy when a fire ripped through their brewery and restaurant, the Smoko Room. The local Matakana and craft beer communities have rallied to their cause, and they are currently brewing from several locations, with Scotts, 8 Wired, Steam, Kereru, B-Studio, Hallertau and Urbanaut all allowing Sawmill to brew on their equipment. Thanks to Sawmill's sheer will and determination, we haven't seen any shortage of supply or great tasting beer, and plans are underway to bring the brewery back to its former glory. TM

Bach Brewing

Around the World & Back to the Beach

Born and bred in the Hawke's Bay, Bach Brewing founder Craig Cooper leads beer concept design and development, taking inspiration from the classic kiwi lifestyle and New Zealand's stunning coastlines. But before Bach Brewing, there was Limburg Brewery.

Back in 1998, when the opportunity arose to buy a share in Hawke's Bay's own award-winning Limburg Brewery, Craig jumped at the chance to bring together his two greatest passions, beer and beaches. However, not like the booming market it is today, the craft beer market was developing more slowly than anticipated, and by 2008, Limburg Brewery was closed. Craig held on to the Limburg Beer Company, brands and recipes though, in the hope of bringing them back to life one day.

After heading abroad to develop his career in the liquor industry, and having been fortunate enough to have lived in many cities around the world, Craig returned to New Zealand six years ago to pursue his passion for craft beer by starting up a new venture, Bach Brewing. Setting roots down in Auckland in 2013, Bach Brewing has since gathered a trophy cabinet full of awards across beer styles, and in 2019 won top honour at the New Zealand Beer Awards, being named Champion Brewer Exhibitor.
