Winter's End

We see off the chilly months with a bang

As we wave goodbye to what has been a pleasant but slightly unsettling winter, we venture out again, in a non-threatening virtual kinda way, to our southern hemisphere neighbours in South America. Like New Zealand's burgeoning industry (if you factor out the Covid for a minute), Chile and Argentina are injecting some New World dynamism into the ancient practice of winemaking and garnering some impressive results.

When you're done with that, check out Italian luminaries, Pasqua. We zero in on their 11 Minute rosé; watch the video – they've gone to a great deal of trouble. But then, that is how they roll. Kiwi Chardonnay superstars, Kumeu River have released their latest single vineyard expressions to a captivated audience that includes us. Sarah Jessica Parker, with the assistance of Invivo, has gone pink. Gisborne's Matawhero have their new, top-of-the-line Irwin Chardonnay out. We have a stunning collection of acclaimed wines that have all been awarded 100 out of 100, plus we do a run-down on the 2017 vintage in Bordeaux. New Zealand Pinot Noir, Pinot Gris, Chablis and indigenous grape varieties all get their page in the spotlight.

Moving on from wine, we take a look at Lighthouse gin, the superb New Zealand artisanal offering making waves around the world. Kiwi medal-winning dynamos Helmsman have a new look, along with a new rum to go with it. Chivas Regal have a brand new blended whisky aged for 13 years in Oloroso sherry casks. Our craft beer page highlights the latest offerings from ParrotDog, Emerson's and Bach Brewing.

And that's just the main stuff. Look out, here comes Spring.

South America

Chile and Argentina, the home of cheap reds and juicy Malbec? Well, it used to be; however, a quick look at the stunning wineries on the next few pages should burst that bubble. The Spanish introduced the grape vine to Chile, then shortly after, the French varieties arrived. Fortunately, what never arrived was the invasive, all-destroying Phylloxera. The Chilean wine industry has historically been centred around Santiago and the Central Valley, where easy access saw winemaking boom. While the central Maipo Valley remains an important player, there continues to be much change. New 'old' varieties are being championed, Cinsault for instance, and the regions of production have become wider and more diverse, extending to the north and south, from down on the coast to deep in the Andes.

Chile is such a long and narrow country that with a small journey either to the north or the south, one can arrive at a completely different terroir where climate, land, soil and aspect bear no relationship to what came before. In short, it's like a whole host of disparate winemaking countries bundled together into one narrow strip. Expertise and skill are at an all-time high, with the newly developed regions and varieties and a new generation of winemakers all making a difference. Chile is now recognised as a mecca for fine wine. The great-value, entry-level wines are there of course, but so is the top-end, with quality abounding.

Just over the Andes is Argentina and the story is similar, although not quite the same. Financially, Argentina is less prosperous, with local producers struggling, the government not particularly pro a strong wine industry and the emerging generation turning to craft beer. Malbec is still king here, the big talking point being where it's grown and how it's made. Mendoza sits at a pretty high altitude anyway, a desert at the foothills of the Andes. The varietal diversity story continues here, with the grape variety to watch being Cabernet Franc. Here too, fine wines have made a name for themselves and demand attention.

Renacer

A little slice of Italy in the middle of Argentina, and they make an Amarone as well. The boutique and eco-friendly Renacer winery is located in Perdriel, a sub-region of Luján de Cuyo in the west of Mendoza, known for its exceptional affinity for viticulture. The vineyards are irrigated with water from melted Andean snows. Renacer's approach displays an Italian sensibility, with the grounds evoking a Tuscan feel, winning the owners first prize for Most Innovative Winery from Argentina. Established in 2002, Renacer continues to be under the ownership of Patricio Reich, a Chilean entrepreneur with a passion for wine and for the Malbec grape in particular. Winemaker Lucas Amoretti has access to state-of-the-art Italian technology and winemaking expertise, to ensure that he crafts the very best Italian-inspired but unequivocally Argentinean wines. Renacer's Amarone was started as a joint project with Italy's Allegrini family. There are four levels in the Renacer range: Punto Final, Punto Final Reserva, Renacer (the label for the top-tier wines) and the Amarone.

Zuccardi

An engineer specialising in irrigation, Alberto Zuccardi established his first winery in order to demonstrate the viability of the irrigation system he'd developed. It was the subsequent generation's Alberto who put Zuccardi winemaking on the map, with his sons José and Sebastián currently heading up different aspects of the business.

As a winemaker, Sebastián strives to express the Zuccardi terroir to the best of his ability. He is part of the new generation focused on the importance of individual sites, the difference between terroirs, and breaking-down the vast, lumped-together regions, such as the Uco Valley, that one encounters in Argentina. The site pictured here was purchased 10 years ago and established by Sebastián. Built from material located on the site, the stunning winery is an architectural reflection of its rugged surroundings, with its processes based on concrete tanks and minimal oak use. Expressive, fruit forward wines derived from premium terroir, half the Zuccardi wine made remains in Argentina as a local favourite.

The fruit is from premium terroir in Mendoza's Vista Flores and La Consulta wine districts in the Valle de Uco. Using distinct blends from selected vineyards, each batch was separately harvested at different times. This is wonderfully pure and balanced. Violet notes, vibrant fruit, dark cherry and chocolate, a chalky nature to the tannins and a very open structure consistent with Zuccardi's extensive use of concrete tanks.

Huarpe

The Huarpe name is derived from Mendoza's original inhabitants, the Huarpe people, a pre-Columbian civilisation who established a system for getting water to the arid desert by building channels to move it down from the Andes. The winery sits 970 metres above sea level in Agrelo, Luján de Cuyo, where its terroir is considered one of Argentina's best. Winemaker José Hernandez Toso did his apprenticeship in Germany and Italy, and brother Max Toso brings the business acumen to the partnership. Originally Italian émigrés, the Toso family have been making wine in Argentina since 1880.

Riglos

Gualtallary, in the Uco Valley's Tupungato region, is gaining global recognition for its high-end wines. In 2016, the owners of Huarpe partnered with friends Darío Werthein and Fabián Suffern, founders of the highly-acclaimed Riglos winery. The Riglos wines are crafted from a single estate, Finca Las Divas, which is situated in Gualtallary at 1,350 metres above sea level, where the demanding altitude and wide-ranging temperatures generate a singular quality. Considered one of the top wineries in Argentina, the Riglos wines are sought after by sommeliers and collectors. The name itself is a tribute to the area where Darío's and Fabián's ancestors arrived in Argentina.

Achaval Ferrer

Anyone in the know will more than likely tell you that the world's top Malbec comes from Achaval Ferrer. They are very much the first family of Argentinean wine, with their vine age averaging an impressive 107 years. The vineyard is irrigated in the traditional Argentinean method using channels. The company itself is 20 years old, has recently changed hands and is now French-owned. Stylistically, the Achaval Ferrer wines display a balance between ripeness and the freshness generated by natural acidity. The older folk in Argentina contend that it's a green and unripe style, while the international media and fine wine lovers rave about these wines. Give them a go – you won't be disappointed. Winemaker Gustavo Rearte studied at Juan Agustín Maza University in Mendoza, travelling to California and New Zealand to brush up on his vinous skills before returning home to join Achaval Ferrer.

Chakana

Channelling their 19th century Italian winemaking roots, the descendants of Giovanni Pelizzatti utilise some of the best terroir in Argentina to express themselves through their wines. Chakana is located in Agrelo in Luján de Cuyo, Mendoza, with vineyards under organic and biodynamic certification and additional holdings in the Uco Valley. They adhere to minimal winemaking intervention to harness the eloquence of the land, embracing the concept of estate wines by making them in the place where the grapes are grown, to create a comprehensive integration between agricultural and oenological practices. Winemaker Gabriel Bloise is a member of the new generation of Mendocino winemakers, his skills perfected through multiple grape harvests in Tuscany, Priorato, Australia and California. He believes that the best wines are those that resonate with the essence of the place they are developed.

Kaiken

Kaiken is the project of Chile's Aurelio Montes and son, Aurelio Jnr, who, from the other side of the Andes, recognised the outstanding potential of the Mendoza and Salta regions. Kaiken are proponents of sustainable winemaking practices and manage their Finca de Vistalba estate according to biodynamic principles. The estate vineyards are situated in the heart of Mendoza and further south in the Uco Valley. The focus there is primarily on Malbec and Cabernet Sauvignon. The Kaiken winery was built in 1920. Fermentation takes place in 12,000 to 30,000-litre tanks, with 1,550 barrels for aging and concrete tanks for more efficient energy use via biodynamic processes.

Emiliana

Founded by Chile's Guilisasti family, Emiliana Organic Vineyards are located in Chile's Casablanca Valley. Their organic and biodynamic way of winemaking began as a trial. When they saw the resulting difference in their wines, they started moving more vineyards over. Emiliana employ a comprehensive, interlocking system that involves the creation of balanced vineyard ecosystems within which animals, insects and plants play a part in the maintenance of vineyard balance, acting as natural pesticides, weed killers and compost producers. 100% of the organic waste produced is used in the production of compost, which is then reused as fertilizer in the fields. Boxes are made from recycled materials and the corks come from certified sustainable companies.

Emiliana's workers are guaranteed a fair wage and offered scholarships to provide them with professional development opportunities. They are taught how to handle organic gardens and provided with land to grow their own fruit and vegetables for family consumption, along with the necessary training and tools to create their own future micro-enterprises producing honey, olive oil, wool and hats. Emiliana provides land to the workers to apply for government housing programs and improve family housing conditions. The wines themselves are expressive, fragrant, clean and cooler in style, owing to the proximity of the sea.

Viña Aquitania

Aquitania is a joint venture between Chile and France. In 1984, Château Cos d'Estournel's Bruno Prats and the late Paul Pontallier of Château Margaux started looking for top terroir in Chile. They had a mutual friend in Felipe de Solminihac, a Chilean winemaker of French origin, who led them to the site they own today. The vineyard, Quebrada de Macul, is located in the heart of the Maipo Valley. During his daily travels past it, Felipe remained aware this was the very best part of the region. The vines, of Bordeaux origin, were planted and the winery finished in 1993. From Aquitania comes French-inspired winemaking off old vines. They are so deeply within the centre of Santiago that the city has grown to surround them. These are exceptional wines, much more restrained than the stereotypical styles that can come from this region. In 2002, a fourth partner joined the founders, longtime friend Ghislain de Montgolfier from Champagne.

Errázuriz

Located in the Aconcagua Valley, the Errázuriz estate is the vinous obsession of Eduardo Chadwick, widely acknowledged as the driving force behind Chilean wine. Viña Chadwick are considered the first family of the country's wine industry. In 2004, frustrated by a lack of global recognition, Eduardo organised a comparative tasting in Berlin. In the tasting, which included first growths and other international benchmarks, Eduardo's wines topped the list. The biodynamic Señal, a joint venture with California's wine royalty, the Mondavi family, is part of Eduardo's stable of brands. The Errázuriz property is a spectacular marriage of the old and the new, with the original 1870-era winery situated atop the tunnels housing cellars and barrel storage. Beside it, among the 600ha of vineyards, sits the new winery, environmentally created to recirculate air, chill it with the water from the hills and naturally cool the building.

An intense white spirit that's soft and smooth in style, pisco was originally developed by 16th-century Spanish settlers and is South America's answer to France's eau-de-vie or Italy's grappa. Chilean distilleries are grouped into two categories, based on aromatic expressiveness: types utilising the Muscat grape are very fragrant, while those using Pedro Jiménez, Moscatel de Asturia and Torontel are more subtle.

Lapostolle

Alexandra Marnier Lapostolle, great-granddaughter of the creator of Grand Marnier, is the force behind Lapostolle, a spectacular winery overlooking the Apalta Vineyard in the Colchagua Valley in Chile. The Marnier Lapostolle family are famous for their spirits and liqueurs, but they have also been involved with winemaking for generations. The Chilean chapter of the family business was founded by Alexandra and her husband, Cyril de Bournet, in 1994. The winery is now managed by 7th-generation Charles-Henri de Bournet. The Lapostolle vineyards in Apalta are certified organic and biodynamic, though the wines are not labelled that way, as it is the grapes that are certified, not the winery. The wines are very much Chilean terroir blended with French expertise. The consultant is Michel Rolland, well-known in Bordeaux. They are wines that have been seen in New Zealand before, though not for many years. The top label, Clos Apalta, is not in the latest shipment, as it takes a different route to market, going through Bordeaux. Lapostolle possess a stunning state-of-the-art winery, plus a five-star hotel and resort.

Montes

Pioneers of premium and ultra-premium wines within Chile, Montes were pioneers in betting on the Apalta Valley and with planting vineyards on mountain slopes, in the process creating the benchmark for Chile's winemaking industry. One of South America's most highly regarded producers, Wine Spectator referred to Montes as 'the best all-round winery in South America' while the lofty Decanter described their Alpha Cabernet as 'one of the best for its price anywhere in the world.' Chairman Aurelio Montes takes all this in his globe-straddling stride. Together with the late Douglas Murray, he started the ball rolling in 1987 to showcase to the world Chile's hitherto untapped potential for premium winemaking. This is not to say Montes are stuck in the past; they continue to innovate and are currently creating some of the best wines they have ever made. Montes also harbour a commitment to sustainability, seeking to reduce their winemaking footprint by creating biological corridors that encourage beneficial insects and provide natural pest control, and grazing animals to control the growth of weeds and improve soil fertility.

 90626 ALPHA BLACK
CHARDONNAY 2015
$37.99

CASE OF 12 $36.99 A BOTTLE

The Alpha Blacks are a new generation of Montes wines and a step up from the Montes Alpha range. The nose offers ripe tropical aromas of pineapple and banana with a hint of peach, while the coastal climate makes itself felt in subtle savoury notes. A generous and broad palate of melon and stonefruit is augmented by potent toasted notes of hazelnut and vanilla, the strong acidity holding it all together. For lovers of powerful, oaky Chardonnays.

MARÍA-LUZ AND FELIPE MARÍN

Casa Marín

Located in the San Antonio Valley, Casa Marín's owner and winemaker is the determined María Luz Marín. María believed she could make world-class Sauvignon Blanc there. In Chile, to own a winery, you either inherit it or you have investors. María could not convince anyone to invest in her project, and didn't come from money. Instead, she worked in the bulk wine market and was very good at it. There, she accumulated enough to start her winery, and has subsequently made a global name for her wines. Her son, Felipe Marín, is now the winemaker and his wife Jamie is the marketing manager. The Casa Marín wines are markedly different to the standard Chilean style; via the steepness, the soil and proximity to the sea, they are much cooler in nature. The first woman to own a winery in Chile (the only one in the San Antonio Valley) got there by herself, when everyone told her she couldn't.

CASA MARÍN

90769 CIPRESSES VINEYARD SAUVIGNON BLANC 2019
$34.99

CASE OF 6 $33.99 A BOTTLE

The flagship in the Casa Marín portfolio and twice voted Best Sauvignon Blanc in the World. With its granite and limestone soils and cool maritime winds, Lo Abarca's singular influence provides depth, salinity and a blend of roundness and sharp natural acidity. A chalky, mineral, lean style of Sauvignon Blanc with an austere mid-palate, in nature not dissimilar to the cooler Awatere regions of Marlborough.

CASA MARÍN LO ABARCA
 90765 CARTAGENA SAUVIGNON BLANC 2018
$17.99 CASE OF 6 $16.99 A BOTTLE

A French clone of Sauvignon Blanc, the grapes for this wine grow on the highest parts of the vineyard where it's warmer. A tropical, expressive style that's had stainless steel aging and maturation. Approachable, rich, full bodied with notes of peach and apple, a hint of capsicum and asparagus.

CASA MARÍN LO ABARCA
 90764 CARTAGENA PINOT NOIR 2018
$22.99 CASE OF 6 $21.99 A BOTTLE

Casa Marín's freshest, most fruity Pinot Noir, the grapes come mainly from clay soils and are harvested two weeks earlier than the rest. Aged 12 months in French oak barrels without any new oak, this has intense red fruit aromas and a lively acidity. The palate is gentle and fruit forward, the finish softly elegant.

DYNAMIC FAMILY WINERY

Pasqua

One of Italy's leading independent and privately-owned wine companies, Pasqua are also one of the few wineries of the Veneto region to headquarter themselves in the heart of the city of Verona. In balance to their urbane air, the family have 80 years of experience working the land here, and have been big drivers of the region's success, ensuring wines like Soave and Valpolicella are known throughout the wine-drinking world. While they produce exceptional value entry-level wines, Pasqua also have a reputation for crafting beautifully made, top-end and Amarone-style expressions. Things have gone next level with the company now in the hands of the third generation, Riccardo, Alessandro, Cecilia and Giovanni.

Irwin

Matawhero's Flagship Chardonnay

Matawhero was established in 1968 by Bill Irwin, a visionary who defied the conventional thinking of the time. He pioneered the introduction of new varieties and clones to the country, and in doing so changed the face of Kiwi winemaking. The Gisborne winery was purchased from Bill's son Denis in 2008 by Richard and Kirsten Searle. Steeped in their historic legacy, Matawhero pay homage to the Irwins with this superb limited release, barrel fermented Chardonnay. With fruit from the famed Tietjen vineyard, indigenous yeasts, fermentation in a combination of American and Hungarian oak barriques, a full malolactic and ten months sur lie prior to careful fining and bottling, this vibrantly ripe, opulent, textural classic is a fitting tribute to Matawhero's groundbreaking originals.

FALLETTO

BRUNO GIACOSA

62937 BAROLO FALLETTO DOCG 2014
297.00

Bruno Giacosa is one of the most famous names in Barbaresco, a village just up the road from Barolo. Very few people produce in both areas, and only one carries the respect of both. The wines of Bruno Giacosa are incredible. The late, great master has taught his daughter Bruna his craft, as his father did before him. Exotic dried red fruits leap from the glass. From Serralunga d'Alba, this is bold and structured, and will be very long-lived. Powerful and captivating, there is a definite vibrancy and brightness to this fabulous expression.

62938 BRUNO GIACOSA RISERVA BAROLO FALLETTO DOCG 2012 $697.00

Barolo is located in Italy's northern Piemonte region. The wines of Barolo are made from Nebbiolo, a variety that is not dissimilar in many ways to Pinot Noir; they have a lifted, perfumed bouquet with rose petal and tar characters, and on the palate the acidity is high, as is the tannin. The structure, though, is light and ethereal.

Barolo is the name of the wine produced from around the village of Barolo and from the surrounding villages that fall into the Barolo appellation. Each of these villages delivers a different style: Serralunga d'Alba produces age worthy wines with power and structure; La Mora offers soft and supple wines; Castiglione Falletto engenders full-bodied and concentrated wines with rich aromatics and a velvety texture; Monforte d'Alba contributes potent, structured wines and the village of Barolo itself makes wines with considerable structure and concentration.

Historically, wines were a blend from across the region, with the various villages merely a part of the whole. However, over the last ten years there has been a concerted move to bottle each village separately and celebrate the differences. Within each village, single vineyards are identified and bottled separately. The structure in Barolo is similar to that in Burgundy, encompassing Village wines and individual villages.

Bordeaux 2017

Looking back to when I tasted this vintage En Primeur, I see in my notes I referenced this as a very pleasurable vintage to taste. Precise, balance and classic are the words that appeared over and over in my notes. Whilst in some recent years, the ripeness of the vintage has for me been a deterrent to the wine exploding its individual site character, this year, the appellation character was clear. This is something that for me is very important in fine Bordeaux, I love a good Margaux that screams Margaux from the glass, too much sameness does not appeal. | LW

New Zealand Pinot Noir

AKARUA

Central Otago

Central Otago's landscape is what you'd call uncompromising and its winemakers can lean towards the flamboyant, but in spite of that, or perhaps because of it, some breathtaking Pinot Noir is being created. The key to Central's significance lies in its sub-regions, which have over time found their feet, revealing the breadth of their diversity and the importance of their individual terroirs.

RUA 18771 PINOT NOIR 2019 $23.99

CASE OF 6 $22.99 A BOTTLE

Akarua today boasts the largest privately-owned estate in Central Otago, with the majority of the vineyards planted in their signature Pinot Noir. Over the last six vintages the Akarua Pinots have accrued 12 trophies and 28 Gold Medals. The Rua is a great drink-now Pinot Noir, seductive and affordable, with layers of sweet, ripe berry flavours, subtle savoury characters and a touch of spice. Soft, supple tannins lead to a long, fruit-driven finish.

Pinot Noir, the grape variety behind the great wines of Burgundy, is a somewhat fickle friend to its protagonists. Temperamental, notoriously difficult to grow and known for driving more than one winemaker to the edge, at its very best, Pinot Noir is responsible for some of the most sublime wines in the world. Light of hue and body, it is nonetheless rich in flavour and character, with an innate ability to extract the most intricate subtleties from the region and the site in which it's grown. Very much the New Zealand wine industry's Great Red Hope, second only in plantings and pickings to Sauvignon Blanc, Pinot Noir responds well to our cool climate. And as you'll see via the following selection, good doesn't have to mean expensive.

DEVIL'S STAIRCASE CENTRAL OTAGO

MUDHOUSE

Marlborough

Once standing somewhat in Central Otago's lengthy shadow, we have been opining for some time now how good Marlborough's Pinot Noir has become. With the variety once planted on the plains as a base for Marlborough's sparkling wines, sites have now sprung up on the hillsides, utilizing the appropriate clones and making some of the best Pinot Noir wines in NZ.

PINOT NOIR 2019

GOLD $16.99

CASE OF 6 $15.99 A BOTTLE

$15.99

A succulent, early-drinking blend of sweet red fruits, the dark cherry and red currant characters enhanced by a subtle surge of spice and cocoa notes, and complemented by an appealing earthy quality and a silky mouthfeel.

Pinot Gris

Alsace

The spiritual home of the aromatic expression, this region of overwhelming beauty is home to some of France's most profound wines. Within its long and narrow confines, a host of geological combinations produce a stunning array of flavours, fragrances and textures, setting the global benchmark for Pinot Gris.

GISSELBRECHT

47028 PINOT GRIS 2018

 $21.99

CASE OF 12 $20.99 A BOTTLE

The Gisselbrecht family have been producing wine in Alsace for over 300 years. Originally selling their wines to négociants, in 1936 Willy Gisselbrecht became an independent wine maker/merchant, one of the first to bottle his own wines. Today the company is run from Dambach-la-Ville by his grandsons, Philippe and Claude, where the company owns 17 ha of some of Alsace's finest vineyard sites. The family also own significant parcels in the Grand Cru Frankstein. Their entry-level Pinot Gris delivers superbly rich and spicy restraint and delicacy that's hard to go past.

Pinot Gris is closely related to Pinot Noir, a variety notoriously prone to mutating. Pinot Noir and Pinot Gris have remarkably similar DNA profiles, with Pinot Gris a mutation that occurred centuries ago. Quite when is a matter for speculation, but records indicate that a variety, known by a number of different names, has been well established in Europe since the Middle Ages. A distinctive looking variety, the Pinot Gris grape skins can vary from blue-black to grey to pink. It is an early-ripening variety suited to cool climate conditions, and does remarkably well in a variety of soils but thrives best in low fertile, well-drained types. It is characterized by a relatively high extract and a lowish acid, and has the ability to adapt to different environments to produce wine styles that are particularly expressive of individual terroirs.

Italy

Pinot Grigio is the varietal name here. In Italy's cool north, the wines typically exhibit a fresh vibrancy, with crisp nashi pear notes and not as many aromatics as you'd find in Alsace or NZ. With its crisp acidity and chalky minerality, some would describe Pinot Grigio as a neutral white wine, but that understates just how good these wines can be.

SANTA MARGHERITA

62581 PINOT GRIGIO 2019 VALDADIGE DOC

 $22.99

CASE OF 12 $21.99 A BOTTLE

Santa Margherita are well known for their innovation, and led the way forward in 1961 when they applied traditional white winemaking techniques to Pinot Grigio fruit, grown in Trentino-Alto Adige, creating the fresh, crisp style of Grigio we know and love today. With the Italian Pinot Grigio variety's characteristic light hues, this is dazzlingly clean, boasting an intense bouquet of ripe, golden apples.

SANTA MARGHERITA

CHURCH ROAD

New Zealand

Pinot Gris is well-suited to New Zealand's cool climate. Plantings have leapt from a mere 19 hectares in 1994 to almost 400. The bulk of the Pinot Gris plantings are in Marlborough and Central Otago, with pockets in Canterbury, Martinborough, Hawkes Bay, Gisborne and Auckland. The surge of interest by winemakers can be attributed to the variety's ability to produce high quality wines that display spicy flavours, good mouth weight and have the ability to cellar well. Like Chardonnay, it can cope with oak fermentation and maturation.

Chablis

Channelling the ancient chalk

SÉGUINOT-BORDET, FOURCHAUME VINEYARD

In the 1980s rivers of inauthentic white averageness from all over the globe were labelled Chablis, some without having seen a Chardonnay grape, let alone a lifetime growing up in Kimmidgerian soil. Not these days. The oyster-shelled terroir that is one of the key components in Chablis' unique profile is now protected by law, as enshrined and important to the wines as the marginal and northerly aspect of Chablis' location. Only one variety counts here, and that is Chardonnay, which thrives in the same chalk soils that run through Champagne. Chablis is indeed Chardonnay in one of its purest expressions, the deliciously lean styles unmistakable in their provenance and restraint, the steely, floral bouquet, delicately crisp, refined flavours and unmistakable underlying flintiness indelibly characteristic of their terroir.

The Indigenous Grape

Where different is good

It's an increasingly homogeneous world, where the things we consume prostrate themselves at the altar of commercial convenience. It's reassuring to know that out at the edges, where interesting items can wither and die through a perceived lack of economic viability (particularly true of fruit varieties), one can still come across determined individuals who refuse to relinquish what's good. In the world of wine, terroir, or place – as the French have always known – is absolutely key; and so, around the world you'll find pockets of singular grape varietals, outside the circle of big names, thriving in the place they call home and delivering an experience that's all their own. Sometimes they're so good, they even travel.

Negroamaro

Negro means black; no surprise then that these are deeply coloured wines. Dark, bitter aromatic notes with hints of cherry and rose. The tannins are medium, often referred to as chunky. Acidity is often fresh and gives a nice lift to all the varietal richness.

Lighthouse

An artisanal New Zealand classic in the making

HEAD DISTILLER, RACHEL HALL

High atop a windswept cliff at the southernmost point of the North Island the Cape Palliser Lighthouse stands lonely watch over Cook Strait. Its light has served as a waypoint for seafarers since 1897.

Lighthouse Gin, inspired by the famous landmark, has similarly been lighting the way for lovers of great gin since 2005. This makes the gin a much more recent arrival than the actual lighthouse of course, but places it nevertheless in the very early days of New Zealand's obsession with craft gins.

Good things take time, as they say, and so it was with Lighthouse Gin. From his base in Martinborough, Neil Catherall spent years researching and perfecting the final recipe and list of botanicals to form his gin. To further ensure the final spirit was bottled exactly as he had intended Neil also commissioned a specially designed and locally made 200-litre copper still.

The distillation process is now run by Rachel Hall, who spent years under Neil's tutelage before taking over as head distiller in 2014. The phrase 'hand-made' tends to be thrown around a lot these days, but for Rachel and Lighthouse it is a mantra to live by. Distilling every single day to supply a burgeoning number of devotees, Rachel then applies by hand every single lid, sticker and neck tag before boxing it all up herself to be sent out to gin lovers worldwide.

Rather than trying to make the next fad or outlandish styled gin, Lighthouse instead concentrate on making something more classic, and making it extremely well. Nine botanicals are utilised, producing a citrus-forward gin with lingering notes of herbs and spice underneath, particularly on the finish. The Lighthouse Gin is also distilled twice to make a soft, elegant spirit with a slightly creamy mouthfeel. Lighthouse also produce the Hawthorn Gin, so named due to it originally being made at the request of Wellington's Hawthorn Bar with cocktails in mind. At 57% ABV the Hawthorn Gin is intense, with the botanicals shining through even stronger, along with a unique peppery character.

In its distinctive red and white striped bottle, Lighthouse Gin is as hard to miss as the light shining out above the water of Palliser Bay at night, but don't be afraid of some rocks with this one, along with a quality tonic of course! | DL

Launching a new look and a new rum

Helmsman, purveyors of fine blended Caribbean rum seasoned with natural herbs and a dash of Kiwi flair have spiced up their offering with a new look and a new white rum. Notes of orange, banana and gingerbread augment the rich rum flavours, with cinnamon, clove, sultana and a touch of toffee chiming in to round out their flagship spiced rum. The new white rum wears its light blond hues and symphony of sweet, subtle flavours with panache. Perfect over ice or mixed in a classic Mojito or Daiquiri.

Chivas

Scotland in the early 19th century had thoroughly undergone the industrial revolution, leading to the rapid urbanisation of the country, with all the opportunities that entailed. Brothers John and James Chivas, living on a remote farm with twelve siblings, had big city dreams. The pair headed (on foot) to Aberdeen, where they established the Chivas Brothers emporium and built a fine reputation; but it was what they crafted and aged beneath the emporiums floors that history remembers them for. Whisky distillation had only recently been legalised, and with the craft still in its infancy much of what was consumed was essentially high-alcohol rotgut.

Chivas Brothers began storing and aging whiskey, and eventually, as their clientele became more discerning and their own skill increased, they began to blend these spirits to make something richer and smoother and altogether greater than the sum of its parts. A Royal Warrant to supply Queen Victoria followed in 1843, and the legend of Chivas Regal was established. This legend has only grown in the nearly two hundred years since the brothers set off for Aberdeen, and these days includes one of the finest ranges of aged blended whiskeys in the world. | DL

Not content to rest on the laurels of their storied history, Chivas Regal have continued to add to and refine their range of both aged and wooded whiskies. The Chivas Extra is one such favourite that has undergone an update. Utilising higher proportions of Oloroso sherry casks the Extra has long been popular for its characters of rich fruit and sweetness. Chivas Extra now has an aged statement attached to it – at thirteen years old the whisky may be new but is certainly no baby!

ParrotDog

ParrotDog sail into Hazyland

Our feathered friends at ParrotDog see the world of beer differently, brewing uncomplicated, approachable, award-winning craft beers with something to suit everyone's tastes. In each brightly-coloured can of ParrotDog's Birdseye is a divine hazy, citrus and stonefruit accented IPA that packs a mellow, soft and silky texture, providing a refreshing change of perspective on hazy IPAs. Juicy, not excessively bitter and sitting at a cool 5.8% alcohol, this makes for a great brew to quench your thirst on those long, hot summer days coming up.

A lot can be said about Adrian's sense of style, as he was all about taking the classics and revving them up a little, like the race-ready version of an otherwise familiar car: its engine a bit bigger, its lines and livery a bit bolder. Adrian's hazy IPA, powered by the freshly-prototyped new hop, Strata, is absolutely roaring with its immensely juicy and dank tropical fruit notes, solid body and hint of resinous pine. Nice. | KA

RICHARD EMERSON

Emerson's

Far out! It's just a beer, man! But, the Hazed & Confused cloudy and deep golden IPA does have a gnarly hit of Riwaka, Simcoe and Mosaic hops, providing you with a highly aromatic brew with a psychedelic burst of tropical citrus flavours, and a totally piney finish. You might be at home or down at the Razza, but at least it's a buzzy as trip for your taste buds.

On the back of the success of the Big Rig APA, the Emerson's brew crew thought it would be a great idea to brew Big Rig's bigger and hoppier brother. American Graffiti is an incredibly luscious and super fresh all American Pale Ale, with a tonne of fresh hops that seem to be hopping right out of your pint. Not over the top on the alcohol, the combination of five American hops results in rich tropical citrus flavours with a touch of spice on the finish. | KA

Bach Brewing's killer pale ales

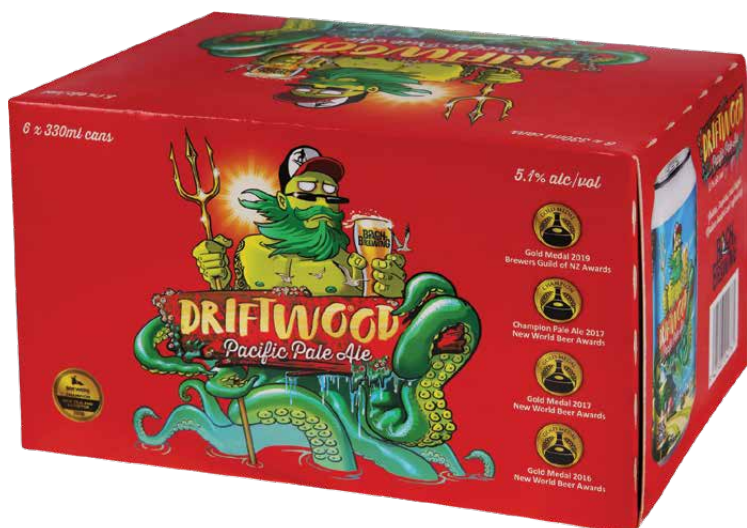

Bach Brewing makes beer for coastal living. Creator and beer lover Craig Cooper has had his hand in the industry for a while. After cutting his teeth on the big names he resettled to NZ with his family in 2013, ready to pursue his own crafty beer dreams. Today Bach Brewing is an Auckland-based, family-owned, gypsy brewing company, contract brewing through Steam Brewing Company in a symbiotic relationship that nurtures Craig's creativity and at the same time gives him the scale of a large, built-for-purpose facility.

Hazy beers, with their juicy textural presence, are a thing, and the gold medal Juicy Hazy Pale Ale comes as an attractively affordable 6-pack of an expensive style. The Driftwood Pacific Pale Ale took gold at the NZ Beer Awards. With its tropical-mango-passionfruit overtones, it's a clean and sessionable drink for when Life drifts by. Comes with a new-look hopster on the packaging. | TM
