The Glengarry Story

Some say it's not wise to work with family; however, as Croatian settlers this is how we established our livelihood and managed to stay united as one. This way of life is all I know, coming into the business as a young adult and being surrounded by good people willing to pass down a dedicated working ethic. I have come to learn that Glengarry have always been the tellers of a story, and have founded a culture involving a passion for wine here in Aotearoa. We are traders of history and tradition in a glass, to be shared in good company, whether it be standing around the barrel in one of our stores or at the dinner table. This makes us akin to the people and families behind the brands we share, who devote their lives to producing and curating their craft.

My path in the business has travelled from sweeping floors to retailing wine to following my father around as I did when a child, learning and gaining experience under his guidance. Needless to say, I've had a few 'I didn't realise there was so much involved' moments. Ways I communicate and look after others can be attributed to my father, as I can hear his voice within my own. Just as my father would say about his father, the qualities that have been passed down are evident in the way we operate.

At the heart of what we do, people come first, and family is something to be safeguarded. Alongside the nurturing of our family is the guardianship of the land that surrounds us. We began with our hands in the soil and continue to stay close to our roots to this day. That's true! These things I've also learnt from my Māori heritage on my mother's side. If you can't find my father or one of my siblings, you'll be sure to encounter them in the bush collecting native flora or rummaging in the garden bed.

So what's the secret to an enduring family business? I'd be quick to say it's the people and the knowledge passing through each generation; it takes time, dedication, and plenty of sacrifices. But as a Croatian family working together, it was always about the end result, and we didn't have a clock-in, clock-out mentality. While it can be hard at times and tough on family life, this path can also bring us together in shared achievements. I honour the opportunities this provides for the future for my younger siblings, my child and my nieces and nephews. All I can do is aim to uphold the mana and legacy that the people before me have succeeded in creating.

He aha te mea nui o te ao. He tāngata, he tāngata, he tāngata

What is the most important thing in the world. It is people, it is people, it is people

Pol Roger

In 1849, at the age of nineteen, Pol Roger established the champagne house that bears his name. It is run today by the fifth generation, an impressive feat given very few champagne houses now remain in family hands. Pol Roger resides in the heart of Epernay, with cellars running below the Avenue de Champagne, famously referred to by Sir Winston Churchill as the most drinkable address in the world. The seven kilometres of caves sit at around 9.5°C, which is cooler than most in Champagne, slowing the secondary fermentation in the bottle and contributing to the unique character of the Pol Roger portfolio. The current releases were made by Chef de Cave Dominique Petit, who was at the house for 19 years. There has been a 15 million euro investment into the winemaking facilities and much innovation undertaken.

Despite this, Pol Roger remains one of the more traditional producers, with their non-vintage champagne an equal blend of Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier. All of the wines at Pol Roger are riddled by hand, with four full time riddlers employed – that’s almost a third of the Champagne region’s remaining total of 15 riddlers. Pol Roger’s top cuvée is the Sir Winston Churchill, a tribute to the man who was an avid fan and an enthusiastic imbibor, as well as a personal friend of Jacque Pol-Roger’s wife, Odette. The exact blend of each release of the Winston is a secret, a Pinot Noir-driven style that is made from grapes off Grand Cru sites that were under vine when Churchill was at his zenith.

Drappier

Multigenerational Magic

BRUT NATURE
43523
ZERO DOSAGE NV
$89.99 NO SULPHUR

While Drappier's champagnes are famously low in sulphur, this cuvée, launched in 2008, has no added sulphur at all. 100% Pinot Noir, it is a blend of two vintages with no dosage, i.e. no sugar added. The wine is unfiltered. Disgorgement dates are shown on the bottles and it is recommended that this is enjoyed within one year of that date; sulphur is used as a preservative, and the evolution of a wine made in this way will be more rapid.

Drappier is considered the finest boutique producer in the Côtes des Bar region of the Aube district, the southernmost region of Champagne. It was founded in 1808 in the village of Urville, and is today headed up by the urbane and amicable Michel Drappier, the seventh generation to run the family business. The eighth generation, Charline, Hugo and Antoine, are immersed in the running of the company and poised to one day take the reins.

Exponents of organic and traditional practices, the Drappiers employ minimal amounts of sulphur (in Champagne the average is 90-130 gm, with the Drappier wines sitting at 0-40mg) and a low dosage approach that bestows a dry and aromatic elegance upon their expressions. No shortage of history either, with Drappier's vaulted cellars tracing back to 1152. The pride of the house, the limestone-rich vineyards themselves, were initially established by the Romans 2,000 years ago.

The region's first zero-rated carbon producers, the Drappiers are proactive in pushing the envelope, fearlessly embracing the concept of large-format bottles (despite losing a staggering 25% to exploding bottles), experimenting with maturing their wine on the ocean floor and developing an exclusive wild yeast sourced from their own estate to use on their wines. They use 90% recycled glass and 75% of their electricity is sourced from solar panels. There is much to admire about this innovative family house, not least the brilliant prices of their exquisite champagnes.

Piper-Heidsieck

The oldest of the three Heidsieck champagne houses, Piper-Heidsieck was founded in 1785 by Florens-Louis Heidsieck. Ambitious to make his mark, Florens-Louis created a cuvée which he presented in person to Queen Marie-Antoinette; a patronage that one assumes was, at a certain point, abruptly severed. Upon his death, Florens-Louis' nephew Christian Heidsieck went into partnership with Henri-Guillaume Piper, an energetic entrepreneur who did much to champion champagne throughout the world. Christian died suddenly, with his widow marrying Henri-Guillaume and the company becoming known as Piper-Heidsieck.

Piper-Heidsieck is today owned by the French Descours family, who adore the wines. The rejuvenation of Piper Heidsieck was begun by Daniel Thibault, who passed on in 2002, ahead of his time. The current Chef de Cave, Regis Camus, worked with Daniel and has continued to direct Piper's impressive evolution. At four million bottles Piper-Heidsieck is one of the top ten producers in terms of volume. The house quality is at an all time high, with more potentially to come. Their prestige cuvée, Rare, was first launched in 1976, and since then the wine has lived up to its name, with the 2006 vintage just the ninth to be released. A hidden gem in the range is the Piper-Heidsieck Vintage – just out and derived from 20 Grand and Premier Cru vineyards, the superbly opulent and elegant 2012 will cellar comfortably for another ten years.

Charles Heidsieck's provenance is immense, with the energetic, extroverted Charles-Camille Heidsieck, made famous in the song Champagne Charlie, founding Charles Heidsieck in 1851. The wines are matured 25 metres underground in chalk cellars dating back to the 11th Century; they represent some of the most underrated and exquisite champagnes ever made.

Charles Heidsieck's Brut Réserve is defined by the house itself as an equation of 60/40/10. The 60 represents the number of crus that go into the blend, although this has been reduced in recent years as the quality has been elevated to new levels. 40 signifies the proportion of reserve wines in the blend. The skill involved in making a non-vintage wine is in the blending, with the ultimate goal a consummate and consistent house style. This proportion of reserve wines is, comparatively, very high. The 10 represents the average age of the reserve wines.

The end result is a cuvée that is toasty, complex and, while a non-vintage style intended for immediate drinking, capable of aging in the bottle for up to ten years. The disgorgement date can be found on the bottle and allows you to monitor this. The Blanc de Blancs NV is new to the range and was launched in 2018. The house is not new to this style though, having been one of the first to produce a champagne exclusively from Chardonnay in 1949 via their flagship cuvée, Blanc de Millénaires.

Perrier-Jouët

Thanks to the exquisite handpainted anemones on its famous Belle Epoque bottles, Perrier-Jouët will be forever associated with the elegant creations of Art Nouveau. The house was established in 1811 by Pierre-Nicolas-Marie Perrier, who added the maiden name of his wife, Adèle Jouët, to complete the title. They settled in the town of Épernay, where Perrier-Jouët have vineyards in locales such as Ay, Avize, Cramant and Mailly. Many of the holdings are planted with the Chardonnay that brings the lauded delicacy to the Perrier-Jouët style.

Ownership changed a lot over the years before the house settled with Pernod Ricard in 2005. Through it all Perrier-Jouët have managed to retain an impressive 65 hectares that accounts for 25 percent of their 3.5 million-bottle production. Fruit is sourced from 70 villages, with half the holdings in the Côte des Blancs due to the Chardonnay focus.

While the village-based Grower champagnes are celebrated for their individual expressions, big players like Perrier-Jouët are required to master the art of producing exceptional consistency in style and quality. Just eight cellar masters have held the post at Perrier-Jouët in two centuries, with Séverine Frerson the current guardian of this heritage. Overseen by Frerson's predecessor, Hervé Deschamps, the first new cuvée in two decades, an exciting Blanc de Blancs, is made from Chardonnay, with 15% reserve wine in the blend, 8g/l dosage and aging on lees for 36 months.

Established in 1760, the refined and elegant Delamotte is one of Champagne's best kept secrets. The majority of its vineyards are Chardonnay and all are Grand cru status. In 1988, Delamotte joined forces with Salon. Though managed separately, both enjoy the stewardship of Didier Depond, who oversees all aspects of the two houses, which are located side-by-side in Les Mesnil.

This familial spirit has its advantages: the stratospheric Salon is made only from the very best vintages, and in tiny quantities. In the years it is not made, the first right to its fruit goes to Delamotte. Didier Depond describes Delamotte as an exercise in balance, power and grace.

Originally established by François Delamotte, the house ended up in the hands of the Lanson family in 1856, thus creating the beginnings of the house of Lanson. Marie-Louise Lanson bequeathed the then small house of Laurent-Perrier to her son Bernard de Nonancourt, and Delamotte to her other son, Charles, who in 1988 sold his property to the Laurent-Perrier group.

Aged for six years, the 2012 Blanc de Blancs is exceptional. 20% was sourced from Le Mesnil-sur-Oger, providing acidity, purity and a chalky note; 20% is from Avize, which delivers balance and structure; 20% comes from Oger, bestowing warmth, body and generosity, while Cramant adds a smoky minerality and Chouilly robust notes and length. Sensational in bottle, and even better in the magnum.

Lanson

Lanson adds a new colour: organic green

One of France’s oldest champagne houses, Lanson was founded in 1760 by François Delamotte. Lanson for many years had a unique house style, choosing not to use malolactic fermentation and boasting extensive vineyard ownership across the region. In the 1990s Moët & Chandon purchased Lanson, only to own the company for less than 200 days before onselling the house and retaining its vineyards. Cellar Master at the time, Jean-Paul Gordon, didn’t waste any time in securing excellent contracts with some of the best vineyards in the region, managing to somehow retain access to the level of fruit quality that Lanson had always enjoyed.

Jean-Paul retired in 2015, and Lanson is now part of the Lanson BCC group, second only in scale to Moët. Their no-malolactic fermentation policy has not been continued for a portion of the wine that is used in the blend, with this change only now starting to appear in the cuvée that we see on the market. The latest Lanson release is a 100% organic champagne, a blend of 50% Pinot Noir, 20% Chardonnay and 30% Pinot Meunier that has undergone lees aging for 36 months and has a dosage of 9g/l. The organic vineyard the fruit is sourced from was purchased in 2010 when owner Pascal Leclerc-Briant died, allowing Lanson to acquire 13ha.

Henri Giraud

On a rapid rise to champagne stardom

Situated in the Grand cru Pinot Noir village of Aÿ, Henri Giraud is an exquisite champagne house with many stories to tell. Production is 260,000 bottles, making it one of the bigger small producers we have. The oak they use is key, sourced from the nearby Argonne Forest that was used for many years by the region. In taking oak from the forest, Giraud also give back, working to restore and rejuvenate the forest for future generations. The barrels are fashioned by utilising traditional processes and practices that were once used in the region. The Grand Cru Fût de Chêne pictured here is now a multi-vintage blend, similar in style to the approach that Krug use with their famed Grand Cuvée.

The latest MV10 is made up of the 2010 vintage and reserve wines that are aged in a solera. This cuvée spends 12 months in small Argonne oak barrels before being matured on lees for six years in bottle. The bottle is closed with the traditional staple of the region, with the Blanc plated in gold and the rosé in rose gold. The Esprit de Giraud is a Pinot Noir-based cuvée that is the first in Champagne to be certified as having zero pesticide residue in the bottle. The wine was monitored for two years by an independent laboratory that looked for traces of 189 different chemicals and found none. While you could once refer to Giraud as one of the greatest estates virtually no one had ever heard of, the quality has seen collectors and champagne lovers flock to these wines, and they are now heavily allocated.

VEUVE CLICQUOT LA GRANDE DAME VINTAGE 2008

49840 $199.99

2008 cellar master Dominique Demarville's first La Grande Dame. Boasting a content of 92% Pinot Noir fruit, this is the most Pinot-dominant La Grande Dame ever. The grapes are sourced from Grand crus Aÿ, Ambonnay, Bouzy, Verzy and Verzenay, with the small percentage of Chardonnay coming from Les Mesnil. 2008 was an exceptional vintage, and this is an extraordinary wine.

49833 VEUVE CLICQUOT VINTAGE 2008 $109.00

The intriguing Veuve Clicquot, with their almost unrivalled cachet and unmistakable branding, are the epitome of elegance and daring. With over two centuries of champagne expertise under their belt, Veuve have forged themselves an enviable reputation, built around the mystique of the formidable Barbe-Nicole Ponsardin, a visionary and a woman of exacting standards, who at the age of 27 began to drive the business to giddy heights and is largely responsible for the huge profile the brand enjoys today.

She became known as La Grande Dame of Champagne and was said to strive for one quality level – the finest. In a game-changing move in the early nineteenth century the Widow Clicquot, with the aid of cellar master Antoine-Aloys de Müller, developed the riddling process. They rotated the bottles daily for six to eight weeks and removing the sediment that formerly clouded the wine, rendering the crucial process of dégorgement more efficient and economic.

Ever the innovative house, Veuve Clicquot were the first to make a rosé champagne. Their massive scale, producing around 18 million bottles, sees them masters of consistency. The Veuve Clicquot vineyards cover 393 hectares, spread over 12 of Champagne's 17 Grands crus and 18 of the 44 Premium crus. The whole range, right through to their exquisite prestige cuvée, is quite simply superb.

VEUVE CLICQUOT VINTAGE ROSÉ 2012

49825 $119.00

The 66th vintage rosé from Veuve. A blend of 51% Pinot Noir, 34% Chardonnay and 15% Pinot Meunier from Premier and Grand Cru vineyards, the colour comes from the addition of 14% Pinot Noir grapes from Bouzy. 11% of the blend was aged in oak, adding a toasty vanillin character to the finesse and elegance of this beautifully balanced wine.

Lilbert-Fils

Resolutely boutique is where it's at for the Lilberts

Lilbert are the smallest of the champagne producers we import, making a tiny 27,000 bottles, all of which come from Grand cru vineyards. Situated in the Chardonnay village of Crémant, the Lilbert family have been grape growers since 1746, commencing the production of wine under their own label in 1907. It's a small team, with fifth-generation Bertrand Lilbert at the helm, while his wife splits her time between the children and the winery. The third member of the team, Bertrand's father, is never far behind. There are then 1.5 people to assist in the vineyards, which cover 3.5ha and are divided into 15 parcels. 80% of the tiny production is non-vintage, with the balance a vintage and a small amount of Perle, a low pressure style.

Champagne writer Peter Liem in his guide sums this producer up well: 'The only problem with these wines is finding them, as the tiny production is eagerly snapped up upon release by a near-cult following of clientele around the world.' The 7 metre-deep cellars date back to 1712 and sit at 10-12 degrees in temperature. There is no oak used, malolactic for at least part of the wine and fermentation is with a strain of yeast harvested in Crémant. The family riddle the bottles by hand at a rate of 4,000 bottles a day. There are seven or eight disgorgements a year. Each time the wine is tasted, with the dosage matching the wine's requirements at that stage.

Grower Champagnes

Grower champagnes are the family enterprises, often stretching back over generations, who own their own vineyards in the heart of the Champagne appellation. From here they grow the grapes to make their own wine, often bottling it on the premises as well. If it's individuality and character you're after, the Grower champagnes have that in spades. Lacking the gargantuan resources of the big players, they are more reliant on the characters to be found within particular vintages and locations, and some would say they are all the better for it. Things are moving at such a pace that in places like the UK and New York, many of the top wine lists are now 100% Grower champagnes.

Situated in Champagne's southern reaches in the Côte des Bar, Serge Mathieu are family owned and managed. They can trace their history back to 1665. Working sustainably and as close to the edge of biodynamics as nature will allow, low filtration, low use of sulphur and gentle handling produce an attractively delicate style that is Pinot Noir dominant.

PAUL BARA
RÉSERVE BRUT NV
 48370 $69.99

They produce a Grand cru Pinot Noir champagne with superb power and drive, the high percentage of reserve wines providing impressive richness and complexity. This has had three years in the cellar prior to release and a dosage of 8g/l.

GISBORNE

Matawhero

Richard and Kirsten Searle proudly carry the vinous torch first lit by the Irwins

Matawhero has been part of Gisborne's vinous landscape since 1968, when it was established by the late Bill Irwin to supply grapes to the local winemakers. Bill was a visionary who defied the conventional thinking of the time. He pioneered the introduction of new varieties and clones to the country, and in doing so changed the face of Kiwi winemaking. In the 1970s Bill's son, Denis, launched the Matawhero brand, using his father's grapes and imparting his own colourful style to a selection of excellent and distinctive wines. His Gewürztraminer won international acclaim, ending up in Buckingham Palace.

When, in 2008, Denis decided to sell Matawhero, local winegrowers Richard and Kirsten Searle grabbed the opportunity and purchased the iconic winery. The Searles have revitalised the operation. The home vineyard has been replanted with new clones, along with a number of exciting new varieties, and the production facilities were upgraded. Kirsten Searle puts it thus: 'Like the Irwins, who passed on a heritage of innovation, we strive to produce individual wines that are shining examples of their Gisborne terroir.'

La Mascaronne

One man's rose-tinted obsessions

Born in Indiana, Tom Bove moved to Provence in 1993, captivated by Miraval, a glorious estate that attained further cult status when, post Tom's revitalisation, it was purchased by Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie. A small parcel of Miraval was retained, which has until recently been the source of the fruit for Mira Luna. Having parted ways with Miraval, in 1999 Tom moved onto his next project, La Mascaronne. La Mascaronne is, in Tom's view, the finest terroir in Provence, sitting just outside the medieval village of Le Luc. The vineyard is a 45-hectare site with rolling hillsides of limestone and clay sitting at an altitude of 300m. In July this year, Tom sold La Mascaronne to Cos d'Estournel owner, Michel Reybier, for an undisclosed sum.

Onto the next project: with that aforementioned parcel of old vines from Miraval, Tom purchased Châteaux Bomont de Cormeil and Bellini. All of the wines produced from La Mascaronne, Bomont de Cormeil, Bellini and Mira Luna are organic and managed collectively. The 2019 La Mascaronne Quat 'saisons displays the benefits of its vaunted terroir, a succulent Cinsault-Grenache rosé with the classic pale Provençal hues, vibrant aromatics, generous and weighty palate and fresh, mouth-watering acidity. The Château Bellini rosé is a bright, luminous pomelo colour, with an intense and complex nose of buttery red fruits and a long, beguiling palate showing a hint of almonds.

the Spirit Hub

The Glengarry Spirits Store
54 Jervis Road Herne Bay

Glengarry Spirits is a stand-alone store, an independent and singular exponent of the finest spirits the world has to offer, located on the Jervis Road site where it all began for Glengarry back in 1945. You could view this venture as separating the alcoholic beverage into its various genres, with each catering to its own distinct fan-base and associated expertise. Thus, over there, we're all about wine, and over here, we're operating as a Spirit Specialist, with each aspect distinctly separate, but siblings nonetheless under the Glengarry banner.

Glengarry Spirits is a shopping experience quite unlike any other currently found in New Zealand. Customers are able to immerse themselves in the world of premium spirits within a specially-crafted space catering solely to the genre, where you will encounter the finest exemplars of each spirit category. The products on offer includes unique items and rare bottlings, dispensed by a team of expert spirit specialists with useful knowledge to share and interesting stories to tell.

As well as functioning as a space to showcase the world of spirits, the Glengarry Spirits store conducts spirit-related tastings and events, with private functions from seminars to celebrations available to be booked. An exciting array of tastings and events awaits. And for those not in Auckland, a dedicated spirit website www.whiskyshop.co.nz houses online the collection instore. Tastings are also held virtually too, join in from anywhere in New Zealand.

Glengarry Jervis Road is Ardbeg's Auckland Embassy, the distillery's spiritual outpost if you will. The famously fanatical Ardbeg Committee members gather on this little piece of sovereign Islay territory to celebrate the re-awakening of Ardbeg and impart their knowledge of all things peat to those around them. Here you will find the full range of Ardbeg available, and some that aren't. You better have your proof of membership ready!

Mount Gay

Mount Gay is one of the world’s oldest and most famous rum producers. In 1703 John Sober (a bit of irony there) inherited a small distillery in Barbados at the top of Mount Gilboa. He appointed his good friend Sir John Gay Alleyene as the manager, a man whose innovations and achievements were so successful that when he passed away the Distillery was renamed in his honor.

The original artesian well dug in 1703 is still in use today, supplying the pure Barbadian water from coral caverns deep below. Mount Gay uses hand-selected sugarcane that is refined into molasses, fermented by a blend of natural open-air yeasts and a special heirloom yeast developed over the centuries. A double distillation from copper pot stills and an ingenious single-distill column still are then married to create the rum. It ages in up to three types of casks before being blended by Trudiann Branker, Mount Gay’s first female Master Blender, who works with the largest stock of old rums in Barbados.

The Eclipse is crisp and aromatic, the embodiment of the Mount Gay style, aged in charred ex-American whiskey casks. Want more richness and complexity? Black Barrel Double Cask Blend is robust and bold from its finishing in heavily charred ex-bourbon barrels. The XO Triple Cask Blend is a beautifully mature rum that introduces cognac barrels to the aging process. Each year the best casks are identified and set aside for at least 10 years, for future blending into one of the world’s finest rums, the 1703 Master Select. | RM

Rum!

Drinks from fermented cane sugar juice have been produced since ancient times and probably originated in India or China. Rum as we know it today was first distilled in the 17th century on the sugarcane plantations of the Caribbean and, tradition has it, on the island of Barbados.

Sugarcane for rum production is harvested by hand and then crushed to release the juice. There are three different ways in which it can then be processed, producing three different bases. This is then either fermented naturally, where the sugars are left in open vats to rely on the natural yeast present in the environment, or controlled, with specific yeast cultures added. Most distilleries use a combination of the two techniques. Rum can be distilled using either a pot still or a continuous still. As with whisky stills, each is unique and handmade. The raw spirit is generally collected from the still at between 70% and 90% alc/vol. Unlike whisky and vodka, which emerge as a clear spirit, freshly-distilled rum can vary in hue from clear to black.

Rums may be infused with herbs and spices, and even with fruit. They can be aged in oak barrels, or in some cases bottled immediately. Rum doesn't need to age for as long as a spirit such as whisky, and it reaches maturity a lot faster. It will also go over the top faster if left too long. This more rapid rate of aging is partly down to the Caribbean climate. As with whisky, most rum is blended before bottling with other batches of differing ages, and is diluted with water for a consistency that normally sits between 40% and 50% alc/vol.

PUERTO PLATA

Brugal

Made in the Dominican Republic, Brugal is used by some of the world's top mixologists, and the only 100% Dominican rum being produced from start to finish on the island. A lot has changed since Don Andrés Brugal arrived in 1888 and established the distillery, however the rum continues to be crafted in the same way. Now in the care of the fifth generation, the Brugal rums are cleaner, less sweet and drier than most due to their method of distillation, with every drop distilled, filtered and cask aged by the family themselves. Cask-aging is approached with the same sort of attitude you'd find in Scotland. The level of heat and humidity in the Dominican Republic ensures a rapid maturation that contributes to the beautiful balance of these rums.

Flor de Caña

130 years of plane crashes, civil wars, hurricanes, fires, earthquakes and volcanic eruptions? Just another day at the office for artisanal rum distillers, the Pellas family

History will always shape what you become, and Flor de Caña is no different. The fifth generation, family-owned distillery has seen its share of adversity, narrowly surviving a plane crash, a civil war, nationalizations, hyperinflation, fires, hurricanes, earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. It was the decade-long turn down during the civil war in the 1980s that meant Flor de Caña would come out the other side with the largest reserve of aged rum in the world.

Nicaragua comes first for the Pellas family, and their dedication to sustainability has seen the distillery recently achieve carbon neutral certification, while the rum is distilled with 100% renewable energy and over 50,000 trees are planted annually. This is the only rum, or spirit for that matter, to be both carbon neutral and Fair Trade certified. A true field to bottle product. The employees also benefit from the company's school and hospital providing free education and healthcare.

The rums themselves are naturally aged in bourbon barrels without artificial ingredients or added sugar, ticking a couple more boxes as gluten free and Kosher. The young and light 4-year-old and the full bodied 7-year-old Gran Reserva bring a perfect balance of aroma and flavour to your tropical cocktails. The exceptionally smooth 12 and 18 year olds will transform your view on rum, while the 25-year-old is perhaps the greatest sipping rum we have in our stores, exhibiting a wonderful array of vanilla and dark cocoa aromas and an alluring texture leading to a long finish. | AS

SMALL BATCH RUM
AGED 7 YEARS
700ML $79.99

While the Philippines is not the first destination that pops to mind when speaking of rum, it holds the perfect ingredients required to make a top-shelf version. Sugarcane grown on volcanic soils in the Philippines' humid subtropical climate, naturally fed with pure spring water, gives the finished product a noticeable rounded freshness. Don Papa stands out as a flagship for the region, distilled in small batches from sweet, rich molasses. Hailing from a single island affectionally known as Sugarlandia and aged for an impressive seven years in oak, this offers excellent value. An exciting addition to your at home cocktail cabinet for a Rum Old Fashioned (nicknamed the Don Fashioned) and more than smooth enough to sip slowly late into the evening. | MT

Highland Park

Channelling their Inner Viking

Remote, windswept and rugged, the Orkney islands rise where the ferocious waters of the Atlantic and the North Sea meet. As they say at Highland Park, Orkney stands proudly apart. The story of both the distillery and its Orkney home cannot be told without reference to hundreds of years of Viking rule, and indeed it is much of this history that provides both Highland Park's inspiration and its lifeblood.

As part of a sprawling Norwegian kingdom, Orkney was the seat of Viking Earls from the ninth century right up until it was absorbed into Scotland as part of a dowry in 1472. The Earls, as one might expect of Vikings, boasted many warriors, but also some capable administrators and even the martyred saint Magnus, whose name was given to the cathedral in the islands' largest town, Kirkwall.

Highland Park's own founder was another Viking Magnus, a butcher and church officer by day, and whisky distiller and smuggler by night. The location of his illicit still overlooking Kirkwall remains the site of Highland Park today. Traditions established by Magnus remain the touchstones for Highland Park. They are one of the few distilleries to still use hand-turned floor maltings – a painstaking process.

Peat is an important part of the whisky, but the style here is quite unique. As on Islay, few trees can survive Orkney's winds, but the character of the peat itself is markedly different. Unlike the medicinal and maritime flavour of Islay, Orkney produces a highly aromatic character from its ancient heather base. Added refinement comes from the exclusive use of sherry casks, producing a final whisky that is smoky, fragrant and extremely rich in flavour. | DL

Jameson

Established in Dublin in the 1770s by a Scotsman, Jameson is a quintessential Irish blend. The production of the triple distilled blended whiskey is overseen today by Brian Nation, who in 2006 became the first Irish distiller to receive the Worshipful Company of Distillers Award for achieving the highest Institute of Brewing & Distilling exam results in the world. As Head Distiller, Brian is responsible for maintaining the quality of all new pot and grain distillates produced in Midleton. The monumental task of overseeing the production process from brewing to distillation comes with the fringe benefit of tasting the whiskey on a daily basis, to ensure the balance of flavours and unique pot still spiciness is correct, of course.

Old Fashioned Week

Cocktail Celebration Nov 1-10

From humble beginnings in 2015, Old Fashioned Week has rapidly become a global event. 2015 saw 50 bars across France participating; this year no fewer than 1,500 worldwide are expected to take part. Originally going by the rather uninspired name of 'Whisky Cocktail,' the Old Fashioned traces its roots back to the early 19th century and has enjoyed unwavering popularity since that time. The simple mix of bourbon (or rye whiskey), sugar, ice, bitters and orange peel is a delicious one, and lends itself well to some modern twists. The 10-day 'week' will begin on November 1st. Join in the fun at home or check with your local bars to see if they're taking part. | DL

The Macallan

The Highland's single malt benchmark

If there existed a Mount Rushmore of Scotch whiskies, then without question The Macallan would be etched proudly upon it. Founded in 1844 on a plateau above the river Spey by barley farmer and school teacher Alexander Reid, The Macallan was one of the first whisky distilleries legally licensed to operate in Scotland. In the nearly two hundred years since then, they have established a reputation for luxury, rarity and above all, quality. From William Tell-like scenes in Bond films featuring a glass of fifty-year-old Macallan to world record-setting prices at auction (a whopping £848,000 for a bottle from 1926), the legend of The Macallan has only seemed to be accelerating in recent years.

Distillation of The Macallan is done through a number of relatively small stills, the idea being to maximise contact of the spirit with copper to produce a rich and full bodied flavour. From the stills, these characters are further enhanced by one of the most selective cuts of new make spirits in the industry. The next step for almost all of this spirit is barrelling in ex-sherry casks. For The Macallan this is perhaps the most important step of all, and their barrels are made to exact specification and selection from American and European oak. The final result is a fruit forward, full, spicy and incredibly rich expression that more than demonstrates exactly why The Macallan whiskies have won such acclaim. | DL

Gin

NEW ZEALAND

The quality of our local gins continues its upward arc

Gin has exploded onto the local scene. With its popularity at an all time high, a dedicated group of New Zealand craft gin producers have concluded that it's their time to shine, putting all their effort and money on the line to produce high-end, small-batch gins that are making the world sit up and take notice.

The French concept of 'terroir', where place of origin is an integral factor in the make-up of a wine, has been embraced by other disciplines, and with gin itself a natural spirit infused with botanicals, the notion is equally applicable. Thus a gin handcrafted in New Zealand is intrinsically Kiwi in its subtle nuances, which means that these locally-made gems can invoke the provenance of their home turf via pristine, locally-sourced ingredients. When combined with fastidious production standards, it makes for a whole new industry showing signs of immense potential.

These are excellent gins by anybody's standards; but don't take our word for it, try them for yourself.

Flavour- some!

Finlandia's flavoured vodkas

Finlandia production focuses on creating a vodka using the most pristine ingredients possible. The use of naturally filtered, pure glacial spring water and all natural fruit flavours and essences helps to achieve an exceptionally clean, unadulterated taste. Finlandia also pioneered the fusion of flavours combining vodka and fruit. The perfect match? It's subjective of course; try these suggestions for a refreshing summer option: Blushing Cranberry Finlandia Cranberry, grapefruit juice and East Imperial Yuzu lemonade | Helsinki Mule Finlandia Lime with East Imperial Thai ginger ale | Mango Breeze Finlandia Mango with cranberry and grapefruit juice | Finlandia Crush Finlandia Coconut, with East Imperial Yuzu lemonade and Cointreau. # Jack Daniel's

MAKE IT COUNT

Brand new releases from America's Whiskey Titans

Tennessee and New Zealand may be hemispheres apart geographically, but Jack Daniel's has become such a popular Kiwi spirit staple it's hard not to think of that iconic black and white label as being a bit of a tribute. Whether it's as a warming tittle on a cold winter's night or, more seasonally now, a cool and refreshing option with your favourite mixer and plenty of ice, the fact remains the same; we love us some 'JDs' in this part of the world. Painstakingly mellowed through ten solid feet of sugar maple charcoal to achieve optimum levels of richness combined with velvety smoothness, the Jack Daniel's recipe is a laborious, time consuming and expensive one. Even the barrels used are put together and toasted by hand by Jack Daniel's themselves, making them one of the very few distilleries in the world to take ownership of this very important process.

Liberty

Liberty Brewing is easily one of New Zealand's brightest in the brewing scene, earning themselves a well-deserved cult following thanks to fantastic award-winning brews such as the zesty C!tra, the dark and brooding Prohibition porter and the frightfully hopped Yakima Monster. Transitioning from hobbyist home brewers to commercial brewing, founders Joe and Christina Wood eventually found themselves moving back home to set up tap in the humble satellite suburb of Helensville, Auckland.

The brewing sweethearts would see themselves and their small crew of seven – consisting mainly of close friends and family – incredibly busy crafting beer for thirsty mouths throughout New Zealand and Australia. Along the way they have picked up a multitude of awards. Slogging it out day after day for a solid ten years, the Woods have displayed a ferocious integrity that is amply represented in their incredible brews. | KA

There is nothing quite like Cassels, a family-operated craft beer brewing company situated in Christchurch and famous for their award-winning, decadently rich milk stout. They have gone to great lengths to source the finest local ingredients, and have not shied away from experimenting with different brewing techniques while staying true to the traditional craft beer values they hold close to their hearts. There are two onsite breweries. One is warehouse-styled, hosting a beehive of activity, hop aromas and commercial stainless-steel stills. What you are most likely to want to feast your eyes upon, however, is Cassels' initial brewery situated inside the historic building known as The Tannery; it contains the unique glory that is Cassels' original wood-fired kettle, proudly on display and in fiery action. The Tannery also hosts Cassels' restaurant and cafe, where you can enjoy divine food and a relaxed atmosphere while watching the wood-fired kettle do its thing. Wood-fired pizza and a fresh cold pint that was only made mere metres away? Nobody in their right mind could pass that up. | KA
